Says Bonfils, of Denver To Make Ships Pay Japan's Car, Home-Made On "Fanatical Minorities"

—By Arthur Brisbane—

Copyright, 1921.

President Harding, who asked the States to help find work for the idle, will be interested in a telegram from his friend and fellow editor, Bonfils of the Denver Post:

The cost of four modern battleships would build two national hard surface highways, one from New York to San Francisco; the other from the Gulf of Mexico to Canada. The four battleships will be obsolete in ten or fifteen years; the highways will stand forever. We have started a movement asking government to build these highways under the supervision of army engineers. This would give employment to several hundred thousands disseminating the money generally among the people, increasing real estate values all over the country, starting a period of national internal improvement that would stimulate all values everywhere. These nat'wal highways are needed—will be built, some day—why not now? The whole thing is sane, practical and wise.

The President ought to employ Bonfils and his partner, who are as determined as bulldogs, and, like the Gila monster, once they bite don't know how to let go.

Besides the roads that Bonfils suggests, the country needs canals, one from Chicago via the Mississippi Valley to the Gulf to make an ocean port of every city on the lakes and of New Orleans a great port for the whole world.

There is plenty of work. American ability would take much interest in supplying good wages to six million men as in accumulating a few more dollars for itself the thing would be done.

The country will thank Lasker of the Shipping Board, for investigating a deal made with England by the so-called "American" International Mercantile Marine.

If that company, born and raised in the office of an Anglo-American banking house, has made a deal to give England control of American ships as well as her own the people of the United States ought to know it.

Lasker and others, wondering how American ships can be made to pay, should take lessons from England.

Subpoena young Harriman, who is trying to do for American ships what his father did for American railroads. Ask him what happened when he sent ships to Egypt thinking he might be allowed to carry here Egyptian cotton. Ask him if the British ever allowed him to carry a single pound on an American boat.

Then let gentlemen that control our shipping ask this question: "If the power of England is used to send every possible pound of freight in British bottoms, why not use the power of the American Government to send our freight in American ships, thus keeping ready for war and making better foreign business?"

Japan exhibits her first "homemade" motor car. The engine, air cooled, twelve horsepower, is made in Indianapolis, otherwise it is all Japanese. That little car, wheel base only 74 inches, weighs 850 pounds, suiting narrow Japanese roads and weak bridges, may be important.

The question in Japan is: "Shall the military party or Japanese organized labor rule?" If "the midget" Japanese automobile sets free the men that drag the jinrikishas, letting them transfer energy from their legs to their brains, Japanese labor may win its fight. The man harnessed to a jinrikisha, or a pick and shovel, has little energy left for thinking; he is easy to handle.

Tailors and shoemakers are dangerous agitators, because at their work they sit and think.

Dr. Nicholas Murray Butler, able citizen whose lectures on education are the best this writer has seen, now warns us against "fanatical minorities": He tells his students that those minorities are the chief danger to real liberty. He knows better than Dr. Butler that the fanatical minority of one day is the power that rules the nation or the world the next day. For instance, the founder of Christianity was condemned and executed by the Roman law as the leader of a fanatical minority. And, most interesting, the leader thus condemned now rules the civilized world, with Rome itself as the centre of that rule.

General Wood tells the Japanese: "We desire to build up commercial relations under free competition." Yes, but not "free competition" between our workers and Asiatic workers. Free competition in brains, in machinery, in efficiency, but "PROTECTION FOR WORKERS IN AMERICA AGAINST WORKERS in other parts of the world living under different conditions.

Friendship for everybody, but American land and American markets for Americans as far as possible.

That may be old-fashioned, but it is the American plan, and "American" includes Mr. Harding and the present administration, fortunately.

SALTONSTALL IS SUCCESSOR TO TUFTS

Endicott P. Saltonstall, well known Boston lawyer, is the new District Attorney of Middlesex County, filling the vacancy caused by the removal of Nathan A. Tufts.

The appointment by Governor Cox was announced today. The Governor's Council confirmed the appointment at once.

Hastening to gather up the reins of office, Mr. Saltonstall said today that his first assistant would be Charles W. Blood, his law partner. As for the other assistants, Mr. Saltonstall said he had made no decision as yet.

"I was asked by the Governor to take the position," he said, "and have taken it. I am going to do the work to the best of my ability."

Shunning publicity and preferring to avoid the limelight, Mr. Saltonstall found himself in the public eye, as he emerged from the second session of the Suffolk Superior Court, where he had been trying a case.

Mr. Saltonstall said that he had no definite program to outline, and that he would have to go over the conditions of the office carefully before making a statement.

10 HURT IN BRISBANE'S BROCKTON STORY OF COLLAPSE

Aerial Swing Drops Twenty Passengers to the Ground at Big Fair

Brockton, Oct. 5.—Two men and eight boys were injured when an aeronautical swing at the Brockton Fair grounds collapsed today.

The accident was witnessed by a large number of bystanders who formed rescue squads and carried or assisted the children from the wrecked swing.

There were twenty passengers in the swing, which was in full operation at the time of the accident. The others, boys and girls between ten and fifteen years old, were not hurt.

None of the injured was seriously hurt. All were able to walk from the emergency hospital on the grounds, where they were taken for first aid treatment. They were:

Frank H. Wheeler of Stoughton, an adult; Harry Irving of Canton, who was riding with his twelve-year-old son, Percy, who was also injured; Bernard Anderson, fourteen years old, of Framingham; John Hanlon, eleven years old, and his brother, Harold, thirteen, of Canton; DeForest Dickinson, twelve years old, of No. 42 Wales street, Brockton, and Russell, Merton and Stanley McEachern, respectively, twelve, twelve and ten years old, brothers, whose home is at No. 122 Union street, Braintree.

The two men sustained slight cuts, while most of the children were both cut and bruised.

The swing was operated by Alfred Gay. It was not one of the regular midway attractions, being situated a considerable distance away.

It consists of several cars built in the form of airplanes, each adorned with a miniature propeller that spins as the car gains motion.

The cars swing from four arms attached to the centre pole. It was the breaking of one of these arms that caused today's accident. When the arm gave way the whole weight was thrown on the other three. They broke under the strain.

The injured were treated at the emergency hospital by Drs. A. E. Pelis and W. F. Fullerton.

BROCKTON STORY OF GAME

Gives Colorful Impressions of World's Title Clash at the Polo Grounds

By ARTHUR BRISBANE

New York, Oct. 5.—Polo Grounds—They will begin the game in 12 minutes, at 2 o'clock. Judge Kenesaw Mountain Landis, who once fined Rockefeller $18,000,000 which Rockefeller never paid—has entered a box with Jacob Ruppert—who used to make real beer.

Judge Landis has a workman's yellow cotton shirt and people wonder how such a man can afford to sit in a box.

Two minutes later the police band comes marching in, escorting the mayor, followed by a escort of statesmen. The mayor is as big as a baseball player.

By the way, a lot of powerful young men, baseball players, are on the field warming up.

The Giants wear white flannel shirts and knickerbockers with blue stripes running up and down. The Yankees are in gray, their travelling dress. Today they are a "visiting" team, although they have been also.

NATIONAL ANTHEM PLAYED.

Just ahead of this reporter a huge creature, over six feet tall, "Shuffling Phil" Douglas of Tennessee, is easily pitching. His easy pitch would knock you senseless. He would make a wonderful father of fine children, if he married an unusually intelligent and nervous woman.

"Star Spangled Banner" playing and the players taking off their caps stand with caps in hands, feet close together. Twelve stand stiffly beside a wreath and monument built on this ball field in honor of Eddie Grant, Harvard graduate and ball player, killed in the Argonne. Now they are practicing again and the photographers are taking photographs.

Shuffling Phil Douglas will pitch for the Giants against Babe Ruth's batting. He ought to feel as those Spanish cavaliers felt when they had Duguesclin captive and he challenged one of them to mortal combat each day. After a while, the Spanish king said he hadn't the heart to keep such a brave man captive, and let him go.

The ball players will parade around the bases. It's after two and they ought to be playing in earnest.

This reporter, you should know, undergrads baseball as well as the Mikado. He saw and played his last game at Jackson School House near plainfield, N. J., when no one out on this field was born. Therefore, if you want baseball turn to Damon Runyon or some other wise one. If you want the careful exact telling that comes from the lips of uniformed babes and animals, read on.

At Jackson school house, we used to call the catches "ticker" and everybody wanted to be "ticker." When it was your turn to bat away! But they have changed the rules now, so that it's hard to foulow them.

Mays, pitcher that threw the ball that killed Chapman of the Cleveland club. Only one fatality in many years. He is from the Ozarks in Missouri. Bought from the Boston club for the Yankees at a big price, a secret pitcher. All this real news of course, comes from generous Damon Runyon, who also next, and hides his contempt for his ignorant neighbor.

Now they announce the details of the game, where the men will stand, what part each will play. The Yankees go to the bat first.

Baseball is simple, a woman or a philosopher could understand it, if he tried. A man stands in one spot with a big club in his hands, ready to hit a ball that another man throws at him from a distance of sixty feet. The catcher stands back of the batter.

Yankees First to Score, on Hits by Miller and Babe Ruth

Polo Grounds, New York, Oct. 5.—First blood for the Yankees! Miller Huggins' American leaguers took the first game of the World's Series from the Giants here today. Forty thousand fans saw the game.

The Yankees scored in the first inning on a single by Miller, a sacrifice by Peckinpaugh and a hit to centre by Ruth.

Home Run Kelly of the Giants lost his first chance to be a hero by fanning in the fourth inning with one out and Frisch on third base.

The Yankees got across another run in the fifth, when McNally stole home after doubling and going to third on Schang's sacrifice. McNally's steal of home was the first in world's series history.

The two great baseball machines went into action before a crowd estimated at close to 40,000 persons, while twice as many were turned away. The bleachers were filled before noon. Two hundred thousand frenzied baseball fans stormed the Polo Grounds today for tickets to the opening game.

The 19,000 available seats for sale to the general public were taken within an hour of the opening of the box offices at the baseball park at 10 o'clock this morning, and every car that left the vicinity of the historic fray for hours thereafter carried away its contingent of disappointed ticket-seekers.

40,000 STORM POLO GROUNDS FOR OPENING GAME OF WORLD SERIES

WEATHER FAIR AND COOL

The weather here was fair and cool early in the day. Shivers were sent down countless spines when the sun went behind a cloud, but it came out again.

Only the limitations of the Polo Grounds are preventing hundreds of thousands from witnessing the clash between Pop Knickerbocker's favorite teams.

There isn't room for one New Yorker in ten who wants to see the series, and thousands are pouring in from nearby cities and towns. Eighteen thousand seats have been reserved for each game.

The stage is set for the most colorful set of ball games ever played, and the weather man has done his part.

It did not require the double attraction of two home clubs in a big money series to keep the fans up all night before the first game. They used to do that when only the Giants were involved. This time, however, the lineup before the barred portals of the Polo Grounds was bigger than ever.

As early as yesterday afternoon the Eighth avenue entrance was cluttered up by restless crowds of boys and young men. They came at that hour to gape at Giants and Yankees who slipped out in pairs and groups, after their final practice. When night fell and the chill of a crisp October evening settled over the Polo Grounds those fans were still there.

BUSY DAY FOR POLICE.

Later a couple of policemen formed a line of men and boys who brought along boxes or camp chairs to settle down through the long night. At midnight runners brought up coffee and "hot dogs," and in the early hours of the morning new customers sought places in the line. By daylight reinforcements were coming up fast. Many a Harlem youth rolled out of his bed at dawn and streaked it to the Polo Grounds.

The players, after their final practice sessions, scattered to their homes in various parts of the city. The Yankees worked before noon and the Giants toned up early after noon. This will be one series where neither team will be herded in one place except during business hours. Several members of both teams live at the Hotel Ansonia and there many fans from out of town trekked last night. Babe Ruth, of course, is the big attraction at the Ansonia.

John J. McGraw and Miller Huggins, the rival managers, posted orders for their men to report at 11 o'clock this morning. The Giants will occupy the big clubhouse near the main exit to Eighth avenue. The Yankees will foregather in their little house a little farther along under the centre field bleachers, that usually occupied by the visitors.

McGRAW HAS QUIET NIGHT.

McGraw spent last evening quietly with a few friends up town. Huggins entertained his elder brother, who came down from Syracuse with some friends as the Yankee leader's guests for the series. He also received the congratulations from a number of his old Cincinnati friends, a Cincinnati, by the way, is the only outside city that has a claim in the series. Col. Huston, one of the Yankee owners, comes from there and so does Huggins. There are more than a hundred Cincinnati bugs here.

McGraw left the offices of the Giants late yesterday afternoon, worming his way through a dense crowd of fans trying to get tickets.

"Of course I think we will win," he said to an interviewer, "but it will be no cinch. We know the Yanks have a lot of dynamite in their bats. If we can tame their big sluggers we ought to beat them on fielding, pitching and base running. I see that everybody is picking Nehf to start tomorrow. Maybe he is the 'logical candidate,' but I never pick my pitcher until after I see how he looks as he warms up. It may be Nehf or it may be Toney or Douglas.

"If they are fit, will they pitch to Ruth? Well, maybe not, if he comes up in a tough spot for us. We expect to handle Babe intelligently."

Huggins, the silent, studious little man who controls the destinies of the Yanks, is no more boastful than McGraw.

"It will be largely a question of pitching," he says. "I don't agree with those who say the Giants have it on us in the box. Where do they get that stuff about Mays being our only pitcher? Have you followed the work of Hoyt in his last ten games, and what about Shawkey and Harper?

"It looks as if Mays will start for us. He is strong, able and willing, a great 'money' pitcher, and the Yanks have a habit of scoring a lot of runs whenever he works. Still I may put in Hoyt. You can never tell what may develop. I think Bob Shawkey is going to be a big factor in this series. I know he isn't being figured that way, but just remember my prediction.

"I think the Yankees will win, but it will be a hard fight. We believe we still outhit the Giants and that their supposed advantage in the field and in the bases will not offset our hitting. Nor do we think Frisch will run wild on the bases. You remember they used to say that about Ty Cobb, and every time he got into a series the opposing catchers stopped him. Wally Schang has been through the mill. Incidentally, he and Mays and Ruth and McNally have never been on a losing team in a World's Series.

SURE MAYS WILL WIN.

"I don't agree with these critics who say we will be up against it if we lose the first game behind Mays. We have some other pitchers, and, above all, we have the punch to overcome natural handicaps. The Yankees are never licked even when they are ten runs behind. They are liable at any time to lambaste the best pitcher for a dozen runs."

Johnny Evers and Ed Rustlach, old Cub stars of a decade ago, favor the Giants.

"Ruth will not get a chance to hit in this series," says Evers. "McGraw's pitchers will not pitch to him when a hit means trouble, you can bet on that. The old Babe will be in there walking. Meusel is the boy who should be groomed to do the hitting for he will find Ruth on the base many a time. The Giants think Bob won't get a foul off Douglas. He may hit Nehf, as he likes those left-handers.

Joe Kelley, old Oriole, and now a scout for the Yankees, takes views directly opposite to Evers' last night at the various baseball headquarters in the hotel districts. The old-timers argued and wrangled, and nobody convinced anybody about anything.

Kelley himself is in a "tough spot" in the series. He is rooting for the Yankees, of course, but John J. McGraw is his old friend. They played together for many years.

Hughey Jennings, who will be on the coaching lines for the Giants, is another old Oriole. He and McGraw and Kelley chatted pleasantly together yesterday at the Giants' offices.

Other news of World's Series will be found on the Sporting pages.

Tad's Sidelights

Polo Grounds, Oct. 5.—Boys, it was cold coming up here. Now, at 12:25, the sun is warm in the press stand.

* * *

The Giants, wearing brown sweaters, came on to the field at 12:25. The crowd whipped them a mighty cheer and the band squatting in front of the Giants' bench played the Wang-Wang Blues.

* * *

These teams playing for the world's championship of the world represent New York, yet only one player on the field was born on Manhattan Isle. That is Frank Frisch. Of course, there's Walt Hoyt, but he was born in town on the wrong side of the bridge.

* * *

Well, it's still chilly, men. Here's how.

* * *

The Yanks are the "visitors" today, as Pink Marsh used to say. "My goodness, the town is jes full of strangers."

* * *

For exchange—A swell souvenir score card for a pair of woolen socks.

* * *

A bloke sitting in back of me has been taking yeast regularly. His friend just slipped him a bag of raisins and he has wrapped himself around those. We momentarily expect developments.

* * *

Ice cream Cohens are a drug on the market here today.

* * *

Whale blubber sandwiches would be more apropos.

* * *

Doesn't that wind bite? Well, this is the first today—out of this hand.

* * *

Jim Corbett is in Chicago champing on the bit waiting for the news over a ticker.

* * *

Sam Mason of Great Neck has bet twenty-five smackers that Ruth is walked ten times during the series.

* * *

The only record that Ruth is liable to break in this series is the long walk record held by Dan O'Leary.

* * *

Bill Fleischman's five seater car just landed at the front gate with twelve friends.

* * *

It seems only a few days ago that coatless fans were tossing straw skimmers out onto the field.

* * *

They ought a have oil stoves under each seat here. B-r-r-r-r. Well, here's to crime. Um, that was good.

* * *

Nor are Palm Beach suit has been seen here so far.

* * *

The Phillies and Athletics would have been a swell preliminary here. They would have played for the celluloid curling iron.

Perfect Weather Now Promised for Second Game of Series

Washington, Oct. 5.—Much favorable baseball weather is promised for the second game of the World Series tomorrow by the official forecaster of the United States Weather Bureau here. It will be much warmer and not so windy, predicted the chief forecaster.

BLEACHERS ARE FIRST TO FILL FOR GAME

Fans Benumbed After Night in Open Under Adverse Weather Conditions

Polo Grounds, New York, Oct. 5.—After a night of feverish expectancy downtown and long hours of waiting on the barred portals of the Brush stadium uptown, New York snapped into its one hundred per cent World's Series early this morning.

At exactly 9:47 a. m. the turnstiles began to revolve at the bleacher entrance on Eighth avenue, and twenty seconds later the benumbed fans who had stood in the front of the line through the chilly night were engaged in foot races to restore their blood circulation and to snatch the choicest seats in the sunny section, which was by far the most comfortable today.

Ten minutes later the waiting lines on the speedway began to writhe along as the back door of the Polo Grounds was opened to accommodate the 23 customers in the upper deck of the huge grandstand. In both these sections the seats were not reserved, and the early birds got the choice locations.

The early morning weather was most disagreeable and worked hardships on thousands of fans.

JOBLESS GET $5 FOR PLACES IN SERIES LINE

Hungry Men Profit as a Result of Arriving to Bail Park Early

New York, Oct. 5.—Resourceful men from the ranks of the unemployed who found places far in front of the lines of World's Series ticket seekers last night sold these advantageous positions to more fortunate brethren this morning for $5.

A police order had been issued that such conduct would not be tolerated, but officers in charge of the blue coated squad were swayed by the pleas of the jobless, many of whom, it was said, declared that upon this one chance lay their opportunity to appease the hunger of wives and babes.

HIRAM F. MILLS, NOTED ENGINEER, DEAD AT 85

Hiram F. Mills, the civil engineer, is dead today at his home in Hingham. He was 85 years of age.

Mr. Mills was a member of the Massachusetts Board of Health from 1886 to 1914. His studies of the purification systems especially in the Merrimac Valley brought the Board into world fame on that subject. Before the purification of sewage in the Merrimac River was undertaken under his direction the death rate there from typhoid was 368 per 100,000. Five years later, it had dropped to 85.

BARS EVIDENCE OBTAINED ILLEGALLY

Judge Murray Rules Liquor Violations Must Occur in Presence of Officers

Judge Michael J. Murray, in one of the most important decisions handed down in Municipal Court in years, today made the following rulings:

1—Policemen may arrest for violations of the liquor law only when such violations have occurred in their presence or when they are provided with warrants.

2—Evidence which has been obtained by unlawful arrest, search or seizure may not be put in at the trial of men charged with violation of the liquor law or any other law.

Acting on these general principles Judge MBurray dismissed the case against Timothy Fitzgerald and Jeremiah McGillicudy, arrested in a Broadway near-beer saloon Sept. 16.

FAR-REACHING EFFECT.

His decision, in the opinion of lawyers, is one of the most far-reaching yet made in the direction of protecting the individual rights of citizens.

That portion of it declaring that evidence "unlawfully obtained" cannot be admitted upsets the precedent set in the famous Tucker murder case when a Massachusetts court found that evidence otherwise admissable might be accepted regardless of how it was obtained.

Judge Murray's ruling is expected to result in a discontinuance of use of "stool pigeons" by the police, in the effort to entrap alleged violators of the liquor law.

It has been a common practice, it is alleged, to send in "stool pigeons" to near-beer saloons, and, following their getting intoxicating liquor, the police make arrests without warrants.

Judge Murray today further ruled that officers making arrests for violations they have seen must do it immediately and must not "abandon the pursuit."

"ABANDONED PURSUIT."

In the Fitzgerald-McGillicuddy case, the defence maintained that one officer made the alleged purchase and left the saloon, and that another officer made the arrest, without a warrant, so "abandoning the pursuit."

The court upheld this contention and further refused to accept as evidence liquor taken from the person of one of the men while he was "unlawfully detained."

Judge Murray based his decision on the decision of the United States Supreme Court in the Goulet case.

E. Mark Sullivan, attorney for the defendants, stated that the decision was one of the most important in years and would do much to halt the growing tendency of courts and officers to ignore the rights of individuals.

OFFICER SHOOTS BOY IN WEST CAMBRIDGE

Joseph P. McConologue, fourteen years old, of No. 53 Trowbridge street, is in the Cambridge Hospital today suffering from a bullet wound in the left thigh, sustained while he was racing away from Railroad Officer Roland Sanborn late last night in the West Cambridge freight yards. Sanborn reported that he saw three boys near some freight cars and that when he appeared they ran. He ordered them to halt, and when they ignored this fired one shot. McConologue fell. The other two were captured. The injured boy is not seriously hurt.

COUNT DENIED SCHOOL JOB AFTER TRIP FROM PARIS TO SPRINGFIELD

PROFESSOR AND CITY FACE SUIT

Springfield, Oct. 5.—Suits for heavy damages against the city and Professor John H. Klaren, head of the languages department of Technical High School, will be brought by Count Alexander Jacques Albert De Saint Felix of Paris.

The count arrived here Saturday, expecting to teach French in the Technical High School. He found no position awaiting him and no one ready to explain how it all happened.

Klaren met the count in Paris last Summer and discussed a teaching position here. St. Felix understood he was engaged and consequently came here, bag and baggage. Since then the school board, Superintendent James H. Van Sickles and Professor Klaren have passed the buck in lively fashion.

At a secret meeting the matter was threshed out and decided against St. Felix. None of the school officials have made any public statement of the facts. Mayor Leonard, alone, has spoken and he blames it all on Professor Klaren, whom he claims acted without authority.

Meanwhile Count St. Felix has established himself at "The Oaks," an exclusive hotel, and placed his case in the hands of an attorney.

WARNS AGAINST TOO LIBERAL RELIGION

Dr. Rihbany Tells Unitarian Conference That Freedom Is "Costly Jewel"

By Associated Press.

Detroit, Mich., Oct. 5.—Warning against excessive imagination in religion, Rev. Abraham M. Rihbany, of Boston, told delegates attending the general conference of Unitarian churches here today that "freedom in religion, as in anything else, is a costly jewel," and that "those who would possess it must not shrink from paying the heavy toll."

Speaking on "the significance of Jesus in liberal thought," Rev. Mr. Rihbany explained the Unitarian church's conception of Christ and of His teachings.

"If orthodoxy has the man who is all memory and no imagination, we have the liberal who is all imagination and no memory," he said. "If orthodoxy has the 'moss-back,' we have the 'rolling stone,' and of the two objects the 'rolling stone' is the more desolate. He is bare and bruised."

The afternoon program today was devoted to a discussion of conservative preaching, with prominent churchmen among the speakers. A temperance meeting also was held, at which Rev. William L. Walsh of Billerica, Mass., and Rev. Lyman V. Rutledge of Dorchester, Mass., spoke on "Home Brew and Democracy."

Mrs. W. K. Vanderbilt, Jr., Sued for $250,000 by Ashman's Widow

New York, Oct. 5.—Mrs. William K. Vanderbilt, Jr., charged with negligence in connection with the death of her ashman, is defendant in a $250,000 suit for damages brought by Mrs. Marinelli Risell, his widow. The suit went on trial before Judge Platzek and a jury here today.

Mrs. Risell charges that her husband was killed in a defective elevator in the Vanderbilt home at No. 666 Fifth avenue.

She maintains that he did not understand the elevator and should not have been called on to operate it.

Miss Elsie A. Jost, Mrs. Vanderbilt's secretary, testified that he had been operating it thirteen days when he was killed and that his employer was in no way responsible for his death.

The Risell family consists of the widow and four children. They were all in court.

Mrs. Risell argued that her husband made over $5,000 a year removing ashes, although he got only $20 a month at the Vanderbilt home, and that loss of his services and companionship was worth $250,000.

Mrs. Vanderbilt was not in court. She was represented by Attorney Thomas L. Hughes. Congr'woman Thomas Jefferson Ryan appeared for Mrs. Risell.

Each must pay 9.2 per cent., while China, India, Italy and Japan were placed in the second category, and were called upon to pay 5.65. Others pay smaller amounts.

SEARLES PROBE TO BE AIDED BY DR. BOWKER

Lawrence Physician States Aged Recluse Died Under Suspicious Circumstances

Lawrence, Oct. 5.—Dr. John C. Bowker, though refusing to admit authorship of mysterious letters to a Boston business man expressing belief that Edward F. Searles, millionaire Methuen recluse, did not die a natural death, declared today he would gladly testify before District Attorney S. Howard Donnell and tell on what he bases his suspicions.

Edward F. Searles, Dr. Bowker declared to a reporter for the Boston American at the physician's home, No. 119 Summer street, Lawrence, died under suspicious circumstances. Beyond that he would say nothing, declaring he would reserve further facts for the benefit of the investigators.

The veteran physician, globe trotter and general man of letters expressed a horror of the thought of opening up the crypt and taking out the body of the man who all his life had courted seclusion and quiet and whose sole wish, as he died, was that he might be allowed to rest in peace.

"Mr Searles," Dr. Bowker said, "was a man who courted quiet. He secluded himself within the gray walls of Pine Lodge. He retired to his part in civic affairs, but was always unostentatious. He wanted to do things, but he wanted no public acclaim.

"And it was so when he saw the end drawing near. He wanted to rest when he died in the same manner that he had lived—in quiet, beneath cold, gray walls."

It is probable Dr. Bowker will be called before District Attorney Donnell before night and asked what he knows of the last days of the millionaire recluse.

While preparations for the exhumation, of the body, now dead for two years, went on, it became known that Victor A. Searles, nephew of the millionaire and who figured so conspicuously as a victim in the test of the Boston blackmail ring, will have counsel present to represent him at the proceedings.

Arthur T. Walker of New York, former confidential secretary to the multi-millionaire Searles, has also directed counsel to be present at the exhumation.

It was to Walker that the will left the bulk of the estate, valued at approximately $50,000,000. Searles was "cut off" with but a small portion of the estate, but by threatening a contest of the will he was given a substantial sum of several millions.

Everyone who took care of the eccentric resident of Methuen just before his death will be called to tell whether they observed any evidence of poisoning. And if the examination indicates that he was poisoned a battle between eminent lawyers will ensue to determine whether the extraordinary will was actually drawn by the millionaire.

District Attorney S. Howard Donnell announced that Assistant Medical Examiner Victor A. Reed, who attended Searles during his last illness, has told him some things about the case that have not been made public. He refused to tell what they were.

The three New York nurses who attended the dying man will be located and arrangements made to bring them to this city should occasion require.

Dr. McCarthy of Dearborn, who, with Dr. McCarthy of New York, cared for Searles during the four weeks prior to July 31, when he died, declared poisoning symptoms are alleged to have been noticeable, will probably be among those questioned by District Attorney Donnell in the event that the autopsy discloses there have been a factor in the millionaire's death.

Thus far the physician has refused to discuss the case, other than to say that he does not believe the symptoms noted and the autopsy disclosed the presence of poison figuring in Searles' end.

Unconventional Marriage Has Precedent in Boston's Best Families

By HAZEL CANNING.

Dr. Percy Stickney Grant, rector of the Church of the Ascension, New York Episcopalian clergyman, engaged to a divorced woman, Mrs. Rita De Acosta Lydig, has flung defiance to the world. He has announced that he will marry the woman of his choice, church rule or no church rule.

Dr. Grant, sixty-year-old divine, and New York bachelor, recently startled New York society when he announced that he would marry Mrs. Lydig. This he did, knowing the ruling of the Episcopal Church, that members may not marry the divorced. Dr. Grant was warned by his bishop that such a marriage would not be recognized by his superiors. Despite all warnings, the sixty-year-old lover, clergyman of determination, has taken his stand in his pulpit and, last Sunday, before a thronging and fashionable audience, declared that "divorce was an unimportant matter."

MRS. LYDIG IN PEW.

While the aging fiance, with fire and defiance, braved the world, fighting for the woman of his choice, from his own pulpit, Mrs. Lydig, "as if carved in marble," sat in the pew beneath her betrothed and listened to every word. There was drama. Every was the primitive in the man, asserting its love and its desires, against all the canons of the church.

That scene, from a New York sanctuary, recalls other occasions, when the great of the earth, and the near-great, have looked upon a woman, to love her, and have stood up bravely, fighting an elemental fight; marrying their beloved, prepared to face whatever ostracism the world had warned, beforehand, it would mete out to them.

A list, starting probably back in the times of the cave men, might be cited. But, more modernly, and about Boston, there have been parallel cases, as of Alice Troy, South Boston shop girl, and Harold Davis, clubman, Harvard graduate and Beacon "streeter."

WORKED AS SALESGIRL.

Alice worked as a salesgirl nine hours of the day in a Boston department store. It was there, so friends said, that Davis met her.

"Don't marry her," old friends advised; "if you do, think, man, what you're giving up. Love is all right, but riches and the associations of a lifetime are precious, too. There'll be times, if you marry her, when you'd dearly love to open the door back again, on the old life you were born to. Then it will be too late. You won't be able."

But young Davis, knowing just as well as Dr. Grant, what he would give up, flung back defiance, as the enamoured rector did in his sermon last Sunday.

"When Beacon Street marries South Boston," said Davis, "Beacon Street is generally the gainer. I'm not worrying about the society fuss I am giving up. Alice and I love each other enough to buy a farm and go to work." Which cases, about Boston, are multiple.

MARRIES LABORER.

Just recently a woman who had been Mrs. Lucy Royle, wife of a well-to-do Cambridge physician, married, over fifty, a young laborer of Dennis, Cape Cod, about twenty-two. When questioned, she stood at bay, defiant, with the query, "a woman can love a man twenty years her senior. Why not a man twenty years her junior?

This woman has given up, just as Dr. Grant may give up, her former, fashionable, friends. She even goes out nursing, to help her laborer bridegroom make both ends meet.

But, like Dr. Grant, in the supreme moment of her life—or what she considers the supreme moment, she throws up her head and tells the world that she will do as she pleases, the old ties forgotten.

Dr. H. Lincoln Chase, distinguished physician, of Brookline, some two years ago, in circumstances a bit similar, flung back his defiance, too. This was when his wife, Mrs. Margaret Chase, announced that she had a perfectly proper, sexless, love for Hartley Dennett, the architect who had designed the handsome Chase home on Kennard road, Brookline.

DOCTOR AGREES.

All Brookline society gasped and waited—waited to see how Dr. Chase would take it. The man and woman clearly saw that on the attitude of the doctor depended his whole future, and the doctor, with a cold courage, spoke boldly, defending his wife.

"Certainly Mrs. Chase loves Dennett," said he, flinging defiance, "and why not? All love is not confined within matrimony, bound by the little golden wedding ring."

Mrs. Chase and Dennett moved to the Chase Summer home in New Hampshire. Dr. Chase week-ends there with them when he can; the handsome Chase home in Brookline was sold, and the doctor rides no more, to call on his patients in Brookline.

So long as the love of a man for the woman of his choice overcomes his judgment, breaks down the canny old barriers of worldly place, so long will men throw away tradition and wealth, position and prizes of life hard won by them, in patient earlier years, in the name of her who is dearer still than all else.

Take Dr. Joseph A. Blake, world-famous surgeon, and Mrs. Blake, who was Mrs. Clarence Mackay, wife of the head of a great telegraph system. Dr. Blake, chief consulting surgeon at the Presbyterian Hospital, was a surgeon second to none in the country. He met and loved Mrs. Clarence Mackay. Her divorce followed, when her four children were given to her husband by the court. Her marriage to Dr. Blake took place soon after.

COUPLE GO ABROAD.

Dr. Blake ceased to serve as surgeon for the Presbyterian Hospital. He went abroad, where he and his wife lived in seclusion. Each knew the forfeits, and each, gladly, gave up what prestige had been theirs, gave it up gladly, in the moment of the great madness, when that which was more to them than life itself, lay pitted in the balance.

So the stories run, of men, renouncing, when the woman they love comes. This is no new story in its most recent exponent, Dr. Grant, the clergyman.

Lord Nelson, for his Lady Hamilton, whom he courted, though society frowned, gave up a good wife and proper parties for the woman who had first been loved by many others. Ruskin, defying his Victorian world, for the love he bore his wife, resigned her to the artist, Millais, and let the neighbors talk.

So J. G. Phelps Stokes, Chicago millionaire, gladly faced the disapproval of his own world to marry a penniless Russian Jewess, Rose Pastor, who had a most checkered career, from Russian immigrant to editor of a labor periodical.

So Peggy O'Neil broke up the Cabinet of Andrew Jackson when she married a member of that Cabinet. For the inference is not hard to draw.

Men may listen to the whispers of ambition for long years. They may work with agony to attain a goal. And then the woman comes. And, be the beloved woman a divorcee, a wife already the property of some other man; be she shop girl or beggar maid, and all the world against her, still, for her, the arms of the man who loves will open in protection, and he will stand up in his might to defend her and to lose all perhaps, even as Dr. Grant of the Church of the Ascension.

MRS. JOSEPH BLAKE.

Mrs. Blake became the wife of the famous surgeon, Dr. Joseph Blake, despite the fact that the courts gave her four children to her first husband, Clarence H. Mackay, after the divorce.

MRS. RITA LYDIG.

Mrs. Lydig is the divorcee whom the Percy Stickney Grant, prominent New York Episcopal clergyman, says he will marry, despite objections by his church superiors.

ARBUCKLE CASE IN COURT, BUT NOT 'FATTY'

Comedian's Counsel Thought Manslaughter Defendant's Presence Unnecessary

By Associated Press.

San Francisco, Oct. 5.—The manslaughter charge against Roscoe C. Arbuckle, in connection with the death of Miss Virginia Rappe after a drinking party in a hotel here a month ago, was on the calendar of the Superior court today, but the defendant was several hundred miles away at his home in Los Angeles.

It was learned from Charles Brennan, one of the defence attorneys, that Arbuckle's presence in court today was not deemed necessary as the case will come up only for instruction and arrangements. District Attorney Matthew Brady intimated, however, that he opposed Arbuckle's absence and probably would not continue until next Friday to enable the motion picture comedian to come to San Francisco and appear.

Federal action against Arbuckle in connection with alleged Volstead act violations was to be held up for some time, it was announced by Robert H. McCormack, special assistant to the attorney general of the United States.

McCormack said he had cancelled plans which called for the immediate arrest of the comedian on a charge of unlawful possession of liquor until after full investigation of the alleged disappearance of $40,000 worth of assorted liquors from a warehouse, declared by McCormack to have been the source of the intoxicating liquors consumed by guests at Arbuckle's party.

When Federal officials raided the establishment, it purported $40,000 stock was not found. McCormack charged advance information of the raid had been conveyed.

McCormack made public a telegram which he had received from Wayne B. Wheeler, chief counsel for the Anti-Saloon League in Washington, and which demanded immediate and strong prosecution of Arbuckle and others who attended his party for alleged violations of the prohibition laws.

McCormack replied, he said, that a full investigation was being made and he would undoubtedly prosecute the persons involved.

JAPS WANT TO REMOVE RACE BARRIERS

Delegates to Disarmament Parley in U. S. Also to Seek World Open Door

Tokio, Oct. 5 (By Associated Press).—Premier Hara is quoted by the Yorozu Chobo today as saying that the Japanese delegates at the Washington conference on Far Eastern affairs and limitation of armaments design to attain perfect agreement between powers based on the fundamental principle of respect for a world open door, the removal of barriers between different races and assurance of the existence of mankind.

"Japan's answer to the American agenda proposals will, of course, embody these principles," the Premier declared.

The conference at Rairen, between the representatives of Japan and the far eastern Republic of Siberia, the Premier says, is progressing. The questions discussed, he added, mainly concerned commercial and industrial affairs in Siberia, guarantees for life and property, the right to lease land and customs.

The Japanese government's policy concerning the evacuation of Siberia remains unchanged, Premier Hara declared, and the withdrawal will be carried out at the proper time, which the government will itself decide. The politicalsituation, he said, forbids evacuation of the Japanese troops in the maritime province, including Vladivostok, for the moment, and the withdrawal from Sakhalien may not be carried out in the immediate future.

CORCORAN WILL MOVE TO NEW YORK CITY

Leases Home in Port Chester and Will Practice Law in the Metropolis.

William J. Corcoran, former district attorney of Middlesex County, whose disbarment, with that of Daniel H. Coakley and Daniel V. McInnes, has been demanded by the Boston Bar Association, has leased a home in Port Chester, N. Y., and intends to take up the practice of law in New York.

It is certain that he will no longer continue a resident of Massachusetts, although what his plans are for the residence he has at No. 14 Burroughs street, Jamaica Plain, have not been learned.

He is expected to wind up his business affairs here through agents.

A stir was caused in East Cambridge today when it was learned that Acting District Attorney Charles Raymond Cabot had ordered Captain Herbert Gordon to appear before him today. Cabot requested Chief of Police McBride last night to notify Gordon to be on hand. The purpose of the conference was not disclosed.

Attorney General Allen told reporters when asked about the petition for the removal of ismict Attorney Joseph C. Pelletier of Suffolk county that the Tufts case took more than a year to prepare, but that he did not think the Pelletier matter would take so long to study.

The Bar Association filed sixty typewritten pages of charges and an additional 3,000 typewritten pages in exhibits which Allen and his assistants are analyzing. If the attorney general decides that the evidence warrants he will file with the Supreme Court a bill of information as was done in the Tufts case. There is keen and growing interest in legal and political circles as to what Allen will do in Suffolk county.

SIX SHOTS FIRED IN POLICE CHASE IN SOUTH END

200 Citizens Join In Pursuit of Cook Accused of Passing Worthless Checks

Following a chase in the South End today during which six shots were fired by policemen, Foster Davis, colored cook on the U. S. S. Nantucket, was arrested near Massachusetts and Columbus avenues.

He was pursued by two police inspectors, two private detectives and 200 citizens.

He was booked on a charge of passing a bad check for $487.

Detectives Thompson and Alexander arrested Davis after he fled from a lodging house on Northampton street where he had called to arrest him.

It is alleged by the police that Davis has escaped from policemen and detectives six times during the past seven years after being arrested. It also is charged that he knocked out two policemen in Baltimore in making an escape.

In addition to being booked on a charge of passing a bad check, he was charged with being a fugitive from justice. The police say he is wanted in Petersburg, Va., for forging a $25 check.

WEST END ;RE DRIVES OUT TEN FAMILIES

Ten families were driven to the street from their lodgings by fire in the five-story brick block at No. 64-66 Revere street today. The fire started in the basement from undetermined cause and resulted in $2,500 damage. The flames ascended the air shaft and mushroomed.

WOOD RETIRES AFTER 36 YEARS IN U. S. ARMY

To Be Made Governor-General of the Philippines at Once Says Weeks

By Associated Press.

Washington, Oct. 5. — Major-General Leonard Wood retired today from active service in the army to accept appointment as Governor-General of the Philippine Islands, thus terminating voluntarily more than 36 years of military life.

His retirement was caused by insistence of administration officials that he accept the new post and the refusal of Congress to permit him to do so while continuing his active army status.

In announcing the General's retirement, Secretary Weeks said he soon would select a vice-governor for the islands and expected immediately to commission General Wood to duty as governor-general.

Weeks announced also that nominations would be forwarded to Congress without delay promoting Brigadier-General Charles J. Bailey, commanding the second coast artillery district, to fill the vacancy caused by General Wood's retirement.

General Wood began his army career as a contract surgeon in June, 1885.

TROLLEY WINS AS COMMUNITY ENTERPRISE

Being Rehabilitated When Run for the Public Good, Says Babson

Atlantic City, Oct. 5.—Street railways have ceased to be public playthings and their future depends entirely on their treatment as a real public utility, Roger W. Babson of Wellesley Hills, Mass., told the members of the American Electric Railway Association in a convention here today.

Lines are being rehabilitated, he declared, whenever operated as a local community enterprise for the public good.

"Most of our street railway troubles come from the old idea that its principal reason for existence was to satisfy the financial, political and liberal 'joy riders,'" he asserted.

"The street railway needs service at cost, with the sliding scale of fares and, possibly, wages as related to dividends; the local board of control with all books open to car riders and employe alike, showing the results of the local operating unit; customer ownership; increased stock equity; gradual amortization of debt by reducing obligations at maturity, instead of refunding with an increase; willingness on the part of the management to do what the rail-in-the-wool street railway expert has said is impossible."

RULES OF "NAME-THE-AUTO" CONTEST

Following are the rules which must be observed by those who desire to take part in this unique experiment:

The Boston American's Name-this-Auto competition is a test of "know-ledge and judgment open to all readers of the Boston American, irrespective of age, living in any city or town in New England or Canada.

Ninety-four awards, with a total value of $1,500, will be paid in cash at the close of the competition.

On each weekday, for fifty days there will appear in the Boston American a drawing of an automobile. The name-plate of the car will not be shown in the picture. Participants in the Test will be asked to identify the automobiles thus shown.

In addition, they will be asked to submit, at the end of the test, an essay on the subject of "Walk Right—Drive Right," to consist of not less than fifty nor more than one hundred words.

Participation in any other feature of its kind in the Boston American in the past will not bar anybody from entering this one. The only persons barred are employes of the Boston American (and other Hearst publications) and members of their families.

Every participant will be permitted to submit one set of pictures, but each set must contain only one title for each picture. No participant will be entitled to more than one award, and not more than one award will be given to any one family.

Answers must be neatly written, typewritten, or printed, on the coupon (or a copy thereof) supplied by the Boston American and must be accompanied by either the automobile picture printed in the Boston American or a pen or pencil copy thereof.

Each answer must have the name, address, etc., of the participant written on the blank furnished.

Do not send in your answers in "list" form; that is, do not write the names of the automobiles one under another, on a sheet of paper. Use the coupon or a copy of it.

Do not, under any circumstances, send in any answers before the end of the Test. Keep your answers from day to day. At the end of the test arrange them in numerical order and then send them in in one package at one time.

Time will not be a factor in making the awards. The first set of answers sent in when the test is over will not be considered more favorably than the last.

All answers must be sent to the Name-this-Auto Editor of the Boston American within a specified time limit, which will be announced later.

A complete set of answers must be submitted, together with a "Walk Right-Drive Right" suggestion.

All envelopes or packages containing the answers and suggestions must be legibly addressed as follows:

"Name-this-Auto Editor, Boston American, No. 8 Summer street, Boston (8), Mass."

Each envelope or package must have the name and address of the sender legibly written or stamped in the upper left-hand corner.

It is absolutely necessary that all envelopes or packages containing answers or suggestions be sent fully prepaid at POSTAL LETTER RATES. Mail of this character is classified by the Post Office as first class matter. The Boston American reserves the right to refuse to consider any sets of answers sent by mail upon which charges for postal delivery are not fully prepaid.

The Boston American reserves the right to make any change in or addition to these conditions that it may deem necessary in order to conduct this test fairly and properly.

The Boston American's decision on any question which may arise in the test and regarding the final awards to be final. The entry of a participant is a complete acceptance of all conditions or regulations now made or to be made.

Or, you may have a friend who owns one. In any event, this is one of the cars the identifying of which will not take much time.

There is no law to prevent your taking a position at the curb for a few minutes and looking the cars over as they pass or studying them as they are parked. You are sure to see more than one of this make during problem No. 9 can be considered solved almost as soon as presented.

CLIP THE PICTURE.

Write the name. Clip the picture. Put it with those that have preceded it. At the end of the Boston American's $1,500 Name-this-Auto Test send it in with forty-nine others. Send with it your essay on "The Best Way to Lessen the Number of New England Highway Accidents."

With the printing tomorrow of Picture No. 10, the Name-this-Auto Test will be one-fifth over. Finding it easy? It will be no more difficult as we go along. This is not a Test which suddenly grows more severe as we approach the half-way mark. On the contrary, many of you may find that the Name-this-Auto Test is hardest at the beginning.

There are ninety-four prizes—the "top" one $500—and they "must be won!" The Auto Test editor will not be surprised if many contestants name practically all the fifty pictures. In that event, much will depend upon the clarity with which you give expression to your views on the subject of Walk Right-Drive Right, in an essay of from fifty to one hundred words.

"SAFETY IDEAS WANTED."

It wasn't so very long ago, you know, that the "silent policeman" was a novelty. You may have a "safety" idea as good as the "silent policeman." Write it out. Send it in at the end of the Test with your fifty pictures.

Five hundred dollars, first prize in the Name-this-Auto Test, is waiting for the reader of the Boston American — boy or girl, or woman—who names the largest number of automobiles pictured in this Test and backs that success with the best "safety" essay.

AMERICA MUST BUILD SHIPS, SAYS LASKER

Economic Stability Depends on Merchant Marine, He Tells Advertising Men

New York, Oct. 5.—Until America as a whole awakens to the fact that national economic stability is dependent upon the establishment of a national merchant marine, there can never be an American merchant marine, Chairman Lasker of the Shipping Board declared today in an address before the Associated Advertising Clubs of the World.

Reviewing the work of the present board during its existence of sixteen weeks, he asked the "patience and indulgence of the country," declaring that if these were not given "America's economic life on the seas, for the next generation, is dark, indeed."

The American nation today is possessed of 1,450 oceangoing steel ships of about 10,000,000 tons deadweight, the speaker said, adding that he had considered only steel bottoms, since "eradication" of all concrete and wooden hulls had been determined upon.

The speaker predicted that the shipping fleet "would no longer be a burden to the American taxpayer." Losses had been checked, he said, and not more than $5,000,000 a month would be required from now until the end of the fiscal year.

"The war did it," Mr. Welch declared. "America again stands before the world as the home of the doughnut, the pie and the bean pot."

MISS ANGLIN IN NEW PLAY AT PLYMOUTH

"Woman of Bronze" Gives Her Opportunity to Display Emotional Power

By FRED J. McISAAC
Dramatic Editor

"The Woman of Bronze," a rather striking title for a play, offers Margaret Anglin at the Plymouth Theatre a chance to be emotional. The theme which hapens to this middle-aged wife, for whose husband an artful hussy is angling skillfully, would cause a woman of bronze to dissolve in tears.

The bronze woman, however, is a great statue which is started in the first act and isn't finished when the play ends, and the audience never even sees it. Miss Anglin is not the bronze woman, not at all, she is a very human one.

Although no credit is given to the original authors, and though all the actors are Americans and the scene laid in New York, "The Woman of Bronze" doesn't travel very far before you discover its Gallic origin. As a matter of fact it was played at the Comedie Francaise in 1907 as "The Rival." It was adapted and turned into a fountain of emotion for Miss Anglin by Paul Kester.

FIRST ACT SLOW.

"The Woman of Bronze" is slow in getting started. Most of the first act was devoted to inconsequential chatter, and the introduction of a flock of rather stupid characters. It warmed up just before the end when Sylvia threw herself at the head of the fascinating sculptor, played rather nonchalantly from beginning to end by Harry Minturn, who talks through his teeth.

As Sylvia was being heatedly embraced by the artist, his wife entered, rear-right, and stood turned to stone. Being a clever woman she avoided a scene and the curtain fell quietly.

In the second act we find a party in progress. While noisy guests are capering around Miss Anglin tells a confidant her frightful experience of the night before, when she followed her husband to a rendezvous with Sylvia. The tense of her recital is contrasted with the lightness around her, and the narrator is often interrupted by some inconsequential remark from a guest, which she answers in the same vein.

In order to give Miss Anglin her great scene it is necessary to get her husband's mistress into the house, so the author does it without even bothering to think up a plausible explanation for bringing her there.

Again Miss Anglin finds the sculptor embracing her rival, and this time she runs the gamut of all the emotions, first in a scene with the husband, in which she strives to keep him with her; then in a contest with the girl, trying to drive her away. Once she considers using a long knife upon the intruder but the assertion of the girl that she is to become a mother stays her hand.

To give Miss Anglin credit, these scenes are played by her with great sincerity and much emotional force. You can understand a woman who loves a man and has great ambitions for him grieving as she does when she sees him abandon her and quit his career for a fool girl.

After the big scene there is a third act, one year later, when the husband comes sneaking home to get a glimpse of his studio and his wife. It seems that Sylvia's baby died and she and he had gotten sick of each other. Then Margaret Anglin entered and exhibited pity for his misfortune, pointing to his unfinished "woman of bronze," suggested that he go to work and refused firmly to take him on again as her husband. The curtain fell rather apologetically. The acting supports is not remarkable.

35,000 ATTEND BIG FAIR AT BROCKTON

Track Record Lowered by Single G., World's Champion Pacer

Brockton, Oct. 5.—One of the largest first-day crowds in the history of the Brockton Agricultural Society, approximately 35,000, attended the opening of the Forty-eighth Brockton Fair.

Typical fair weather, fast horse racing and the presence of several thousands of kiddies featured the opening day.

Much interest centered in the horse racing for part of the $40,000 purse offered by the society this year. The speedy steppers were headed by Single G, the world's champion matinee pacer, who twice lowered the track record of 2:06 2-4 established ten years ago by Little Boy.

The speedy pacer in the first heat of the free-for-all pace, Chamber of Commerce stake, $3,000 purse, paced the mile in 2:05¾. His second heat was a duplication of the first, but the third attempt he clipped off one-half a second, setting the new mark of 2:04¾. The pacer won first money with ease and the plaudits of hundreds who cheered him to the echo.

Silkobel, a fast brown gelding, driven by J. Orr, took first money in the 2:14 trot, and Guy Onward, H. Crossman's speedy gelding, carried off first money in the 2:17 trot. Junior Hal, with three straight heats, won first money in the 2:18 pace. Colonel Bidwell took first money with three straight heats.

One of the best horse shows in years was staged during the day. In the harness horse class, Irvington Belle, from the Martin Farm, won the blue ribbon and first prize.

A balloon ascension and stage show attracted the crowds all the afternoon and evening. The educational building was thronged during the day, where shoes were manufactured and tacks turned out in full view of the audience.

One of the visitors during the afternoon was Thomas W. Lawson., former president of the Massachusetts Agricultural Society, who motored over, accompanied by his son, Douglas Lawson and the latter's wife.

DE MILLE FILM DRAWS RECORD CROWDS

Director Scores Again in Screen Version of "The Affairs of Anatol"

By FRIEDA DAVIS.

As Achille Cortelen says to his daughter, Anna, in the "The Claw," "It's good to do a thing well, isn't it?" It is good, from any point of view, but especially so from a box office point of view, when one is connected with the motion picture industry.

That Cecil De Mille has done well with the screening of "The Affairs of Anatol" is attested to by the throng that is collected outside the Park Theatre daily. It further proves that the public knows what it wants and when it gets it you can't keep them away.

Someone objected to the picture the other day on the grounds that there was so little of it that was Schnitzler. "But it wasn't intended to be Schnitzler!" I argued. "You couldn't very well screen that highly entertaining but thoroughly detached dialogue. The filmable parts were nearly all put in, anyway."

"Huh!" he snorted.

"Schnitzler aside," I asked, "didn't you like the picture as a picture?"

"Oh, as a picture," he admitted, "it was great."

So that's what.

TALMADGES GOING WEST.

Norma and Constance Talmadge are the latest to heed Horace Greeley's advice concerning the chances in the West. As soon as Norma finishes "shooting" "Smilin' Through," she will leave for Hollywood to start work on another, one that evidently calls for more outdoor photography, since she declares the California sun is needed rather than the November gloom of the East.

Constance is going with her in order to take a few exteriors for her next production. She will, however, return almost immediately, leaving her sister and mother on the coast.

Lloyd Ingraham, who has been picked as the director for "The Sign of the Jack o' Lantern," will have the task of giving orders to his own sister, Zella. Ingraham, who will be seen in an important role. Miss Ingraham has been a vaudeville player for several years, though this is her first try at pictures.

FRANK MAYO MARRIED. . . .

Word from Los Angeles announces that Frank Mayo is the latest member of the film colony out there to be married. The bride is Dagmar Godowsky, daughter of the pianist, Leopold Godowsky.

They went to Tia Juana, Mex., last Sunday, where the knot was tied. At present, Mr. and Mrs. Mayo will live at the home of the bride's parents in Los Angeles. Mayo was divorced from his first wife, Joyce E. Mayo, last week.

A Gentle Way to End Corns

The Modern Method—Scientific, Easy, Quick and Sure

The old corn enders were harsh, crude and uncertain. They came into disrepute.

Then a world-famed laboratory created a new method, and millions have adopted it.

The new way is Blue-jay—liquid or plaster. One applies it by a touch. The pain stops instantly, and soon the whole corn loosens and comes out.

To cure a corn and keep it now is folly. Stop it the moment it appears. Remove it in this gentle way.

Watch one corn go when Blue-jay is applied. You will let it deal with all corns after that.

Yeast Vitamon Tablets Give Firm Flesh "Pep" That Makes Men Win

Increase Energy and Clear the Skin—Easy and Economical to Take—Results Quick.

To at once increase energy and put on firm "stay-there" flesh, thousands of thin, nervous, run-down folks have turned to the new tablet form of true yeast-vitamine known to druggists as Mastin's VITAMON. This supplies a proper dose of all three vitamines (A, B and C) and is so highly concentrated that results are quick and wonderful.

Nine out of every ten people working inside most of the time fail to get enough oxygen into their lungs or enough health-building nourishment from their foods, and as a result they become thin, sunken-cheeked, hollow-chested, run-down and underweight. Such folks will find this simple test well worth trying: First weigh yourself and measure yourself. Next take Mastin's VITAMON—two tablets with every meal. Then weigh and measure yourself again each week and continue taking Mastin's VITAMON regularly until you are satisfied with your gain in weight and energy.

Mastin's VITAMON Tablets mix with your food, help it to digest and provide the health-giving, strength-building nourishment that your body must have to make firm tissue, strong nerves, rich blood and a keen, active brain. They will not upset the stomach or cause that bloated feeling, but, on the contrary, are a great aid in overcoming indigestion or chronic constipation. Pimples, boils and skin eruptions seem to vanish as if by magic, leaving the complexion clear and beautiful. Mastin's VITAMON Tablets are easy and economical to take and they keep indefinitely. So remarkable are the benefits from these highly concentrated tablets that entire satisfaction is absolutely guaranteed or the small amount you pay for the trial will be promptly refunded. Be sure to remember the name—Mastin's VI-TA-MON—the original and genuine yeast-vitamine tablet. There is nothing else like it, so do not accept imitations or substitutes. You can get Mastin's VITAMON Tablets at all good druggists, such as Houghton & Dutton, Shepard Stores, Epstein's, Walker Bintel's, Macy's 2 stores, Armstrong's 4 stores, Liggetts.

MILLION MAY HEAR SPEECH BY HARDING

Sound Amplifier Will Carry His Voice as Far as San Francisco Nov. 11

By Associated Press.

Washington, Oct. 5.—Thousands of persons in New York, Chicago and San Francisco may hear President Harding's speech at the burial of the unknown American soldier at Arlington, November 11th, if local arrangements can be made to assemble them within range of sound amplifiers to be installed by American Telephone and Telegraph engineers.

In the three cities, if audiences can be assembled in clear spaces where there is quiet and where there would be no disturbing echoes, it is entirely possible that a million persons could be placed to hear the speech.

The loud speakers to be used are not commercial devices, but are the product of the ingenuity of the telephone engineers, and are to be used for public purposes wherever they can be of the greatest benefit.

When it was decided that the keynote of the conference would be sounded in the funeral services of the unknown soldier on Armistice Day, the matter was turned over to the Secretary of War, and details for the perfection of the plan were worked out by the general staff in connection with the telephone engineers.

What did the pretty sister of Champion Dempsey's partner "click" the Broadway chorus girls? There was a reason, of course. The Boston Sunday Advertiser asked the victor. Read her story, on Sunday. Illustrated.

KILLS SELF WITH SON ASLEEP AT HIS SIDE

Springfield Man Visiting in Taunton Fires Fatal Shot Without Warning

Taunton, Oct. 5.—While his eighteen-year-old son slept peacefully beside him, John F. Mason, 50 years old, of No. 515 Union street, Springfield, shot and killed himself in the home of Edwin Shepard, No. 192 Winthrop street, this city, early today.

Mason had come to Taunton to take over a house he had bought from Shepard, but found the tenants had not moved as expected. Mrs. Shepard offered Mason and his son, who accompanied him, a bed in the Shepard home for the night.

The son, Herman M. Mason, was unable to give any explanation for his father's actions, as the elder man was dying when the boy was wakened by the shot.

Mason formerly lived here, where he was engaged in the manufacture of glass eyes. He leaves a widow, Mrs. Minnie L. Mason, and a daughter Gladys, besides the son.

GLORIA SWANSON AND MOTHER SUED

Film Star and Her Parent Accused of Undue Influence in Obtaining $100,000 Estate

By Universal Service.

Los Angeles, Cal., Oct. 5.—Gloria Swanson and her mother became the central figures in a $100,000 suit today when relatives of the late Matthew P. Burns filed a contest to his will. They charge the screen star and her mother with exerting undue influence on the late proprietor of a string of shoe stores.

Mr. Burns, who died August 17, left his entire estate, except a few small legacies to his widow, Mrs. Adeline L. Burns, who is the mother of Miss Swanson by a former marriage. The estate is valued in excess of $100,000. To his two brothers, a sister and a nephew he bequeathed $500 each. They have filed a contest over the probate of the will.

The complaint, filed through J. Marion Wright, claims that Mr. Burns was of unsound mind and that Mrs. Burns and Miss Swanson exerted undue influence on him, as a result of which he made the will, which they seek to break. It is stated further in the complaint that Miss Swanson and her mother paid $100 for an introduction to Mr. Burns, and that shortly after the introduction Mr. Burns began paying assiduous court to Miss Swanson.

He discovered, however, the complaint recites, that Gloria was married, and thereupon concentrated his attentions on her mother with the result that they were married a short time afterward.

EVERETT MAN AND WOMAN TAKE POISON

Chemist Dead and Mrs. Harvey Gray Is Dying From Effects of Drug

Everett police are today probing the mysterious poisoning of Albert Zabrosky, twenty-three-year-old chemist, and twenty-eight-year-old Mrs. Harvey Gray, at No. 79 Buckman street, Everett, which caused the death of the young man and left the woman with only a fighting chance for her life at the Massachusetts General Hospital.

The poison was said to have been a glyco-phosphate compound, and was taken by them in the young chemist's room. He was a World War veteran and is believed to have been shell-shocked. She is the wife of Harvey Gray, an iron worker, now in the Cambridge Hospital, where he has been suffering from an injured back for several weeks.

Mrs. Gray visited the young chemist, other lodgers told the police, to secure aspirin for a headache. He is said to have told her that he did not have any aspirin, but was relieving the pain of neuralgia and other afflictions incidental to shell shock with glyco-phosphate. He prepared some of the compound, took a dose himself and gave Mrs. Gray a dose, which she swallowed.

Almost immediately afterward the chemist became acutely distressed. Mrs. Gray then became frightened, took mustard water as an emetic and summoned Dr. W. S. Willey of No. 545 Broadway, Everett, for Zabrosky.

The doctor used a stomach pump on both victims and ordered their removal to the hospital. Shortly after arriving there Zabrosky died. Mrs. Gray was on the danger list early today.

TWO MORE FREE BUSES SERVE HYDE PARK

Do Thriving Business Carrying 32 Passengers Each While Cars Are Idle

Two no-charge jitney buses went into service in Hyde Park today, the third day of the Hyde Park boycott of the care of the Eastern Massachusetts Street Railway Company.

The jitneys were sent by a Foxboro concern and each carried thirty-two passengers.

They were busy throughout the forenoon, while the street cars ambled aimlessly about without passengers.

"The public is getting 100 per cent. efficient service from the volunteers," said Thomas F. Fallon, of the boycott or "strike" committee.

Others of the committee were confident that the "strike" or boycott would not end until the people were successful in their fight to escape payment of two 10-cent fares to get to Boston.

They maintain that their's is the only section of the city to be so treated and claim discrimination.

Tomorrow or Thursday the "volunteer" jitneys will open up a run from Cleary square to Dedham, which territory has not been covered by the Eastern Massachusetts for two years.

The volunteer jitneys cannot charge fares because the city government has refused to grant permission for a jitney line in Hyde Park.

GEORGE WIRED KAISER, "ENGLAND IS NEUTRAL"

By Universal Service.

Paris, Oct. 5.—Amazing revelations, purporting to be the suppressed memoirs of General Von Moltke, who was German chief of staff at the beginning of the war, were published in the Matin.

The most sensational statement in the revelations was the declaration that King George of England telegraphed the Kaiser, following the Russian mobilization, "England will remain neutral."

Town of Lancaster to Carry Ruling of Judge Waite to Supreme Court

Lancaster, Oct. 5.—That the assessors had wrongfully taxed certain properties of the Lancaster Junior College, from which the college receives income and on which students are employed to pay their way through the school, was the finding of Judge W. C. Waite of the Superior Court, as received by the school trustees.

Judge Waite orders that the taxes which have been assessed upon this property the past three years be abated. Lancaster will take the case to the Supreme Court.

CHURCH HELPING MAKE PEACE IN WORLD

Most Successful Organization, Instead of Failure, Says Dr. Homer E. Wark

What is the matter with much preaching today? Why does it not grip? Why do so many preachers fall in their sermons? Why do people now become interested in their sermons?

Dr. Homer E. Wark, head of the Department of Missions at Boston University School of Theology, today asked and answered these questions at the formal exercises of Boston University School of Theology matriculation day. He spoke on the subject, "The New Evaluation of Missions."

"A missionary emphasis would perhaps be a source of strength," he said. "Thus religion would be saved from that narrow community interest in which it dies. We are at least beginning to think in international terms. No religious message can grip today that does not think and speak out of a world vision.

"A church will be in missionary spirit and activity about what its minister is. The young minister of today must be trained for missionary leadership.

"Persons with only a provincial interest, outlook, and experience, may declare the Church a failing institution. The world-wide enterprise of the last one hundred years has required more money and workers than had been used previously from the time Christ gave his great commission to the Church. This achievement alone would justify the statement that the Church is the most successful organization of the modern world.

"The missionary today is the man who everywhere works for peace built upon a clearer and better knowledge of one another, a more sympathetic relationship of races.

"The church should emphasize the fact that our missionary enterprise is the one constructive force making for a better tomorrow among the nations, and is easily the first agency in helpful interpretation of the peo-

America Still Eats Choice Meat, Despite Unemployment

By Associated Press.

Washington, Oct. 5.—Business depression and unemployment have not been reflected in the American public's choice of meat, the Institute of American Meat Packers said in a statement issued today, reviewing meat and livestock conditions for September.

"With nearly four million industrial workers reported idle by the national unemployment conference, it naturally would be expected," the statement said, "that the so-called choice meats would be less in demand, and that a considerable share of the consuming public would turn to those cuts which are available at very much lower prices. But with the single exception of four-quarter cuts of beef, there has been no change in consumers' buying preferences."

Hapgood Says Statistics Best Reveal Real Results of Unemployment

By NORMAN HAPGOOD

(Staff Correspondent of the Boston American.)

Washington, Oct. 5.—If you want to get a real feeling about unemployment, don't go to sentimentalists. Go to hard-headed people. Get the facts from them, when they are not looking, so to speak.

Nobody will accuse an insurance company of being sentimental. I have been reading one of the statistical bulletins of the Metropolitan Life Insurance Co. It is a good deal more interesting than the novels of Alexandre Dumas.

This bulletin observes: "The suicide rates of the past ten years present some very interesting characteristics."

Suicide has an exact interest for a life insurance company.

36 PER CENT. INCREASE.

The chart furnished by the company shows that in the first seven months of this year of grace suicide showed an increase of 36 per cent. over the first seven months of the year before.

The same fact has been pointed out by the national committee for mental hygiene, but there is a satisfaction in taking one's data from a life insurance company.

For the years 1911 to 1915, where there were no sharp industrial changes, the suicide rate showed no important variations. Marked changes begin in 1915. I quote the bulletin:

"These were the war years of great economic expansion and increased prosperity for the great body of the American people. Every year, both among the insured and the general population, recorded marked declines in the suicide rate."

1920 RATE WAS LOW.

In 1920 the suicide rate among insured wage-earners was less than one-half of what it had been in 1911.

The change began as the unemployment made its definite start. The cautious statement of the company is this:

"It is an interesting problem to know whether the unemployment situation of the last year is, in fact, responsible for the observed conditions as to suicides. Are suicide rates a very sensitive index of the prevailing economic well-being of the people? It would seem so."

Now let us have a look at crime, especially crimes against property, still confining our data to technical sources.

I have in front of me a big blue book, 1921, Part I., Criminal Statistics, presented to Parliament by command of His Majesty. The compiler is the famous statistician, Edward Troup.

CRIMES OF 1913 TO 1919.

It deals with crimes from 1913 to 1919 inclusive. Says the report:

"The annual fluctuations of the figures for persons for trial are determined by the rise and fall of offenses for dishonesty, which make up five-sixths of the cases which come before the courts. It has been observed that a decrease of larcenies usually coincides with periods of high wages and plentiful employment."

This decrease in stealing during the full employment of 1910 and 1919 was in spite of the demoralization of war. Other crimes—crimes of violence and sexual offenses—actually increased in those war years. This makes the relation between unemployment and theft all the more dramatically clear.

Putting people in prison is a grand entertainment, whether we are dealing with a common thief or with an idealist like Eugene Debs. But it does not solve anything.

The imprisonment of a good man for his opinions shows only the bankruptcy of the world's morality and the imprisonment of thieves is a small part of the cure.

RESULTS OF PRISON LIFE.

When a thief, made in the main by stupid economic blunders, finally lands in prison, we make him worse. The life that corrupts him is thus described by Coleridge:

"Each pore and natural outlet shrivelled up
By ignorance and parching poverty,
His energies roll back upon his heart,
And strangle and corrupt."

Then Coleridge describes our idea of cure:

"Unbefriended and friendless solitude, groaning and tears.
And savage faces, at the clanking hour,
Seen through the steam and vapor of his dungeon
By the lamp's dismal twilight. So he lies,
Circled with evil, till his very soul
Unmoulds its essence."

If our unemployment conferences get anywhere, they will do more to reduce crime, suicide, misery and ignorance than all our prisons have ever done.

Paris, France.

SOULIE expresses the unusual in a gown and a wrap for formal evening wear. The gown is of heavy turquoise blue silk, round-necked and sleeveless, having turned back sections faced with exquisite silver lace at the front of bodice and skirt. The skirt, which hangs in pleats, is given a slight tendency below the silver ribbon girdle, and drops into a point at each side of the lower edge. Silver tulle draped over the shoulders trails on the ground with the effect of a delicate train.

PUFF upon puff of soft light brown velvet gives a unique silhouette to the evening wrap sketched at the right. One ties oneself into it with a huge bow of dull gold lace which, having performed this duty, floats off in graceful scarf ends. The pointed drapery of the gown worn with this wrap may trail beyond its lowest puff.

APPEALS TO STOP OCTOBER AUTO SLAUGHTER

Goodwin Asks Police Chiefs to Enforce More Strictly the Motor Laws

In the hope of averting "the annual October slaughter," State Registrar of Motor Vehicles Frank A. Goodwin today appealed to the police chiefs throughout the State for strictest enforcement of the laws against reckless and drunken auto drivers.

"There is only one way to stop the annual October slaughter," said Goodwin in a letter to them, "and that is by strict enforcement of the motor vehicle laws by the police and this department. Let us take the speed maniacs and drunken operators off the highways."

Goodwin said in his letter, which tells of the unfortunate killing of children by autos:

"October of always been the death month of the year so far as motor vehicle accidents are concerned. In October of last year there were eighty-one persons killed and 1,628 injured on the highways.

"We have just analyzed 400 accidents in which there were 208 persons killed and 533 persons injured, and I am calling the result to your attention in order that you may know when a stricter enforcement is necessary.

"Of these accidents, 312 happened in business or thickly-settled residential districts and 87 in sparsely-settled districts. Of the 208 killed, only 44 were occupants of automobiles; 144 were pedestrians, 76 of them being children; two occupants of wagons; five motorcycle riders; six bicycle riders and two coasters.

"In the tabulation of causes, the one in particular outstanding is, 'Too fast for conditions.' One hundred and thirty-one accidents were from this cause; forty by drunken operators; thirty from 'cutting in;' thirty-seven from operating on the wrong side of road, and a number of minor causes.

"One other significant thing shown by the tabulation is that 106 or more than 25 per cent. of these serious accidents happened at intersections of ways. These figures seem to indicate the necessity for a drastic enforcement of the speed laws in the thickly settled sections, and especially at intersecting ways. Of course, the tabulation shows that in about forty-five cases the pedestrian was careless, but there seems to be no way of remedying this. The pedestrian does not have to have a license to be on the highway, but the motorist does, and the great burden of care is upon him."

The council took no action, but referred the resolution to the Mayor.

Washington, Oct. 5.—Asserting that the League of Nations has been successfully "discharging functions of the highest importance," Senator Sheppard, Democrat, of Texas, announced in the Senate today that he would vote against ratification of the German, Austrian and Hungarian peace treaties because they provide for "our isolation from the league," and "emphasize our desertion of humanity."

BANKERS SOUND OPTIMISTIC CHORDS

Comptroller Crissinger Sees Vast Improvement in Business and Finance

By International News Service.

Los Angeles, Oct. 5.—The economic policy commission of the American Bankers Association believes America is on the verge of a new era of economic prosperity. In a report to convention today the commission said:

"The commission recognizes with satisfaction that the worst of the credit stringency seems to be over and it appears that the country has borne the period of stress remarkably well.

"Natural recuperative forces are now making for recovery and there is every reason to believe that, when wages have been readjusted and normal balance re-established between industries and between nations, our country will enter upon a new era of prosperity and advancement."

The optimistic forecast of the commission was echoed by D. R. Crissinger, Comptroller of Currency, who spoke today before the national bank section of the convention. Crissinger told the bankers:

"It is my pleasure to bring you word of a vast improvement in the general business and financial situation. The last year has been marked by a steady liquidation of credits too long standing and a persistent increase in the volume of cash available for current business. The outlook, by whatever standard judged, is better now than in many months."

Crissinger declared the financial fabric of America has been so strengthened that our banks possess resources and responsibility exceeding more than all the rest of the banking resources of the world.

"The truth is, it seems to me," Crissinger said, "that if we will be fair with institutions that have served us well we will have to admit that they are stronger, sounder, more logical than we ourselves believed them to be."

Circumstances demand, Crissinger said, that America now assume a role of leadership.

"The rehabilitation of Europe is the key to our whole economic and industrial situation," he said.

Sargent-Adams Wedding at Beverly Farms Today

By BETTY ALDEN

The marriage of Mrs. Francis W. Sargent, Jr. (Margery Lee), to Arthur Adams, taking place today at the Beverly Farms home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. George Lee, is to be a very quiet affair.

The former Margery Lee, who has inherited the dark and versatile beauty of her mother, will have no attendants at the ceremony, which will transform her into Mrs. Arthur Adams, and only the immediate family of the couple have been invited to attend.

Despite the simplicity of the wedding, it is causing no little interest among Boston's inner social circles, due to the many prominent family connections of both the bride and the groom. The latter, who makes his home here in town on Pinckney street, is of the Harvard '99 class, and holds membership in the Somerset, Tennis and Racquet, Eastern and Quincy Yacht clubs and the Harvard Club in Boston and New York. His father was the late John Quincy Adams, Charles Francis Adams2 is his brother, and Mrs. Robert Homans (Abigail Adams), a sister.

Mrs. Sargent, whose husband died over a year ago, has made her home in Dover, spending the Summer months at Cohasset. She has three sisters—Mrs. Harry Pratt McKean, Jr. (Bessie Lee) of Beverly Farms, Mrs. "Ollie" Turner (Marie Lee) and Miss Florence Lee, the latter two making their home with their parents at Beverly Farms. Henry Lee is a brother of the bride.

The Rev. Neilson Poe Carey, rector of St. John's Church, Beverly Farms, is to perform the ceremony.

Mr. and Mrs. John Lawrence Bigelow (Audrey T. Sherman), who were married last Saturday at Rye, N. Y., will reside at No. 647 Lexington avenue, New York City. Mr. Sherman, who is a graduate of Harvard, class of '19, is the son of Dr. Ward, class of '19, is the son of Dr. and Mrs. Samuel Lawrence Bigelow, formerly of Boston and now of Ann Arbor, Mich.

Rev. and Mrs. Endicott Peabody, of Groton, Mass., have as their guest their daughter, Mrs. F. Trubee Davison (Dorothy Peabody), who has come from Glen Cove, L. I. It will be recalled that Rev. Peabody officiated at the much-paragraphed wedding of Miss Elsie Parsons and Mr. Moorehead Patterson which was solemnized in Trinity Episcopal Church at Lenox, last month.

Mr. and Mrs. John W. Farwell, of No. 457 Beacon street, and Mr. and Mrs. George Whitefield Chadwick, of No. 360 Marlboro street, have arrived at the Maplewood Hotel in Pittsfield, Mass.

Dr. and Mrs. Alexander Hamilton Rice sailed for England on Tuesday, planning to make a short stay in London before continuing on their way to Egypt and India, where they will spend the Winter.

From the capital comes the news that Mrs. Grafton Winthrop Minot (Constance Gardner), has returned from her Summer home at Prides Crossing and will again occupy her house at No. 1707 H street for the Winter. Mrs. Minot, who has the distinction of being the first Essex county woman ever to take the political stump, created quite a stir among her many society friends when she made her political debut in behalf of the candidacy of Ransom C. Pingree of Haverhill at the Ipswich Town Hall in August.

Miss Elinor De W. Jackson is the daughter of Mrs. James A. Jackson of No. 230 Beacon street. She is one of the active members of the younger set and belongs to the 1920 Sewing Circle.

VISCOUNT BRYCE GOES BACK TO ENGLAND

New York, Oct. 5.—Viscount Bryce, former British Ambassador to the United States, and Viscountess Bryce were passengers on the steamship Adriatic today, sailing for England. To Have Curly, Wavy Hair Like 'Nature's Own'

Women who have trouble keeping their hair in curl, or of securing the desired wavy effect—and especially those who realise the harm that the hot iron does to the hair—will do well to try plain liquid simerine. In no other way can they acquire such pretty waves and curls, having all the appearance of "Nature's own." And the hair, instead of being singed, ragged or dead looking, has such a fresh, lustrous and wholesome beauty.

If one will get a bottle of liquid simerine at any drug store and follow the accompanying directions, she will be amply decked with the waves. This product is of course perfectly harmless and there is nothing sticky, greasy or unpleasant about it. The hair will be quite manageable, no matter in what fashion it is done up.—Advertisement.

What caused the smash between Mme. Wanika and her $40,000 boy American husband? The "spirit messages" of the lady's lamented second husband? or the siren call of her career?" The question will be discussed in an entertaining manner in the Boston Sunday Advertiser. With some interesting pictures.

THIEF ACCUSES AUTO OWNERS OF PLOT

Declares Lynn Men Wanted Cars Stolen That They Might Collect Insurance

Lynn police today began an investigation of the story of Andrew Horne convicted auto thief, who declared that Lynn automobile owners were conspiring with him and his kind for the theft of their own cars and the collection of insurance money.

Horne, according to his lawyer, has admitted that he was solicited by auto owners to steal their machines.

He is quoted as saying that many mysterious "thefts" are made with the consent and at the instigation of the owners of the stolen cars.

Horne's revelations were made in Essex County Superior Court in Lawrence when he was sentenced to one year in jail for larceny of an automobile.

At least eight names of former auto owners who connived at the theft of their own machines and the collection of insurance are in the hands of the police.

Greater Boston police officials have for long suspected that certain auto thefts could not have been perfected without the assistance of the owners.

Horne, however, is the first man to come forward with a detailed story of the workings of the scheme to defraud the auto insurance agencies.

Horne was sentenced to the house of Correction in Essex County rather than to any other institution, in order that agents of the district attorney's office might find him easy to interview.

His revelations are expected to result in arrests of some leading citizens of Lynn.

About a year ago Horne escaped from a sheriff while being taken to the Essex County Courthouse in Salem. He was re-arrested in Portland, Me., several weeks ago.

DARTMOUTH WILL FACE CADET CONQUERORS

By CHARLES E. PARKER.

Whether New Hampshire State's triumph over the Army was due to exceptional ability on the part of the Granite Staters or the poor quality of West Point's second string material, which was used throughout the major portion of that contest, is likely to be decided this week when the football championship of New Hampshire is settled on Dartmouth's athletic field.

New Hampshire State's record last year was not the most impressive among the smaller New England colleges, for it was marked with defeats by Vermont and Holy Cross, and a tie by Colby, and inasmuch as little had been heard of promising new material at the Durham school, its victory over the Army in the second game of last Saturday's doubleheader came as a distinct surprise to the majority of football fans.

* * *

In Captain O'Connor the New Hampshire eleven has a really remarkable backfield man, and his chief aim last year was to develop interference that would carry him past the opposing line sometimes the team succeeded and sometimes it didn't; the latter was usually the case when the opposition played to stop New Hampshire's star back.

* * *

In facing Jack Cannell's Dartmouth team on Saturday, New Hampshire State will be confronted by the best eleven men on an unusually large and promising squad, albeit somewhat inexperienced Dartmouth squad, and a much clearer idea of New Hampshire's strength should be forthcoming.

* * *

Coaches Cannell and Lowden, of the big Green team, are bringing their charges along slowly, but none the less surely. The fact that only one returning lineman of last year's team is eligible to play this season, and but two of the veteran backs presented a new problem which he and his assistants with a task full of difficult or more so than that which has confronted any of the coaches of the larger colleges.

* * *

They were fortunate in being able to draw from the members of the excellent freshman team that represented the Green last Fall, and they were equally fortunate in the schedule arranged for the Green this year—or at least seemed to be until the New Hampshire threat loomed on the horizon—but the Dartmouth style of offensive play, with its quick shifts of both linemen and backs, coupled with the natural doubtful ruling on such plays by the Intercollegiate Football Rules Committee, did not tend to lighten their load.

* * *

Except in sports Dartmouth's play to date has not been entirely satisfactory. There was much loose play and numerous errors in the Norwich game two weeks ago, and, for the first half of the second game of last Saturday's doubleheader came as a distinct surprise to the majority of football fans.

* * *

"Pudge" Neidlinger, the one veteran lineman who was unable to start in either the Norwich or Army game, is counted on to bolster up the line, and should he be ready for the Big Green's next game, Dartmouth's chances should be at least thirty per cent. better than they are apparent in the backfield.

* * *

In the second half of the Middlebury game, the Green gave the first real indication of its ability. Captain Jim Robertson who had been slow in getting away, was off with the other backs, and once under way with the ball it took two and sometimes three Middlebury tacklers to halt him. He forward passed with rare accuracy and his kicking was of the same high order he displayed last year.

* * *

"Chick" Burke played a whirlwind second half against Dave Morey's team, and Eddie Edwards, who returns to football after an absence of three years, proved a tower of strength in the line. Bowman and Bell, two of the backfield candidates, showed to good advantage in this fashion and both are said to be fast and accomplished ground gainers.

* * *

The team, during this last half display, worked under a handicap they would not have to contend with this season, for Dave Morey, who was brought up on Dartmouth football, had instructed his team in the formations employed by the Green, and apparently had coached them to play the Dartmouth starting signal.

FOOTBALL PRIMER

By CHARLES E. PARKER

CHAPTER VII.

The regulation football game is divided into two halves, and each half is divided into two periods, the length of which is determined by agreement between the teams or their representatives prior to the start of the game.

Between the halves play is suspended and a ten-minute rest period given the players, during which they may leave the field, and the second half of the game, as is the case with the first half, is started with a "kick-off" which already has been described.

Between the first and second periods and between the third and fourth periods a one-minute rest is given the players during which the teams exchange ends of the field and the ball is moved from its position to the same relative position at the opposite end of the playing field.

Throughout the game the teams are required to comply with the rules and failure to do so results in penalties to the offending team.

As it is to the advantage of the spectator to know these penalties, they are listed herewith:

LOSS OF TWO YARDS.

Either team, for taking no time out more than three times in a half.

LOSS OF FIVE YARDS.

Either team, for "offside" play or other play involving encroachment on the "neutral zone" or failure of a substitute to report to the referee.

Defensive team, for holding illegal touch. Has ranking first kicker or taking more than two steps with ball after making fair catch.

Offensive team, for player out of bounds, putting ball in play other than as provided in rules, not having 7 players on line of scrimmage, or delay of game.

Either team, for illegal use of hands or arms by opponents, illegal interference with forward pass or illegal forward pass or for roughing the kicker

TONEY WILL PITCH FIRST GAME FOR GIANTS, SAYS JENNINGS

By NICK FLATLEY

New York, Oct. 5.—The wildest cataclysm that has disturbed Manhattan in many a long moon started this afternoon at the Polo Grounds, where the Yankees and the Giants began playing baseball to see which team could win five games and the World's Series title.

New York is what you might call excited about the affair. The frenzy doesn't stick out on the highways and byways as it does in the some of the smaller villages, but it's present, none the less.

• • •

Every New Yorker, by actual count, has aired at least two hundred and ten opinions on Battering Bab Ruth.

• • •

The Crosley is the biggest single figure that has ever loomed over the sports horizon. The stars of other years were practically unknowns when you come to consider the way the big hitter sticks out.

• • •

There were to be 40 000 fans in there cheering this afternoon, and if McGraw follows the system many think he will and has the Baltimore passed on all appearances, there will be a whole lot of squawking

• • •

Watching Babe hit has been the medicine that cured the national pastime in New York when the famous scandal threatened to ruin the game, and if Babe doesn't get a few healthy swings, with Yanks on the bases waiting to be knocked off, the large collision will follow somewhat.

• • •

All that depends on his sturdy shoulders doesn't worry the Babe in the least. When it comes to playing baseball he's what is called hard boiled He likes the plaudits and the shouting, but it doesn't disturb his honest soul in the least. The tougher the situation the more dangerous he is.

• • •

On this important morning, the Bambino appeared just as nervous as a steam roller. He was busy getting his friends lined up with tickets, and probably a thought of the afternoon never entered his curly black head.

• • •

There has been no rumors as yet of any ticket scandal, but there has been a terrible demand. The last-minute fans paid the penalty The speculators haven't many pasteboards, but they're getting plenty for what they have.

• • •

Tickets for four games, sold for $23 by the clubs, are quoted from $55 up. The box seats are corresponding-ly valuable. The New York club, not knowing where the pennants were to flavor the breeze until the week-end days of the season, had to rush things through. And apparently they did a mighty fine job.

• • •

Betting continues to be much lighter than might have been expected, but opinions as to the merits of the teams are so divided that the sure thing babies don't know which way to go. The fans that like the Yanks are willing to give slight odds The Giant sympathisers, also.

• • •

The wagering commissioners are handing out chunks of coin, but they admit, not nearly as much as was expected. One real reason is that New Yorkers' sentiment can't stand solidly with either team while the actual baseball, of the affair, rates the teams so evenly that those who gamble for gain only, will not risk much.

• • •

After the first game, the real betting will start. The contest this afternoon was to furnish a line on the teams in the crucible, but unless all the dope is exploded tomorrow the odds will be about the same as they were before the opening game, won the title in all save three instances.

• • •

Today's victory will, accordingly, become a big favorites

• • •

The usual all-nighters waited up at the rush gates, and the 12,000 unreserved seats were all occupied in the early morning, just as soon as the portals were thrown open.

• • •

Delays in the mail were undoubtedly to rob a few of the investors of a chance to watch the first game off, as many of the durats would not be sent out for delivery before late yesterday afternoon.

But incidents like that mark all these series, and do not diminish a bit the enthusiasm the New York owns, now that all the big end of baseball has been brought here, where the nation's think it belongs.

• • •

Fair weather had been promised for the next week, so undoubtedly few of the games will be postponed by showers. It was clear and a trifle cold in the early hours, but the afternoons have a habit of warming up this time of the year. It will be hot at the Polo Grounds anyway.

• • •

The experts hadn't decided up to practice time, just who should pitch the opening game, but generally one should think that Mays and Nehf, the leading tossers of the clubs, would go to it. That's our personal opinion.

• • •

But Hughey Jennings and Wilbert Robinson and others gave out the information that Toney looked like the toughest nut to crack, and would represent the McGraw clan Others equally learned opine that Douglas, and his spitter, was to be escort against the Babe et al.

• • •

McGraw said nothing, and will undoubtedly use the Babe in the box just as soon as he knew he was going into the clash. He is the manager of the Giants, willing to stand or fall by his own judgment.

• • •

Assistant Yankee managers are pretty strong for Waite Hoyt this Nifiie October morning. The former kid star of the Red Sox has been pitching great ball lately, better even than Mays. But he hasn't the experience of Blonde Carl, nor the marble heart of that same individual. A more logical starter than the peculiar chucker would be hard to discover.

• • •

Like McGraw, Huggins isn't saying anything at all. He will let the world know his selection about 1:45 this afternoon, a quarter of an hour before the curtain goes up with the wildest whoop New Yorkers can unloose.

• • •

One good thing, the uncertainty will not last long. The Yanks are the visiting club and Chas. Ebbets will come to bat in very first inning. Then Nehf or Toney or Douglas, as the case may be, will either pop him or pitch to him. That will let the game settle back and how it will be going to happen. All speculation will be at end, which will be a mighty fine thing, for transferre hasn't been as much guessing since they started these movie star contests.

• • •

One score for today can be truthfully predicted. The Polo Grounds club will lick the other, $48,200 to $28,900 Roughly speaking, though it would be no enough to be "in," the total proceeds of the first game could be $120,000; probably will be unless a lot of tickets got lost somewhere

• • •

The players get 60 per cent. of the total receipts of the first five games, and the winning team takes 60 per cent. of that. And 40 per cent. of 6 per cent. of $120,000 is the first sum mentioned as against 40 per cent. of 60 per cent., etc

DARTMOUTH TEAM HAS FORWARD PASS DEFENCE

Hanover, N. H., Oct. 5.—A signal drill lasting an hour and a half was given the Dartmouth varsity team yesterday The drill was the longest and hardest that the big green team has yet had

At the close of the signal drill, teams C and D were sent through a short scrimmage in which team C scored once.

In the talk before practice the men were drilled on forward passing and the kind of attack which New Hampshire State is expected to bring to Hanover.

Pudge Neidlinger and Eddie Edwards were back on the first team in signal practice, and should be in real form by the end of the week. Pete Hard was back in the Carpenter place at right guard, while George Murphy was given a trial at left tackle.

Offense and defense drill on forwards was formed a part of the practice, with the first two teams alternating on offense and defense

Kiel, fullback on the 1923 freshman team, was the star in the scrimmage, while Blodgett and Bannon also showed up.

Roommate Rivals Is a New Angle to World's Series

This is the first World's Series in which two roommates will play on rival teams.

Bob and "Irish" Meusel live together, however, and will discuss the games over the dinner table each evening in their Harlem lodgings. There will be no downtown boosting for either team, as all of the players have their own homes here.

There will be no occasion, however, for the fans to shout "roommate" at these two boys. Neither thinks his team will win, and neither will consider a proposition to pool a winning and losing end. Bob is rated as the most dangerous hitter on the Giant pitchers menace, aside from Ruth, but Irish is also a long-distanced cluster.

It may fall to the lot of one of them to make a catch that will rob his brother of a hit in a big game, and possibly one of them may strike the blow that will decide which is to take the loser's end of the series.

It's a cinch that neither Bob nor "Irish" is tipping off the other on club signs.

McGRAW JOINED PRO RANKS AS A BOY

Leader of Giants Has Loud Record as Leader on the Diamond

New York, Oct. 5.—The career of John J. McGraw, manager of the New York Giants, and one of the best-known men in professional baseball, stands out as one of the most interesting in the annals of the national sport. McGraw was born in Truxton, N. Y., on April 7, 1873.

McGraw played his first professional game shortly after he discarded short trousers. He made such a reputation around his home town as hard-hitter and skillful fielder that he was recommended to the Olean team, then in the New York State League, and in the Spring of 1890 signed his first baseball contract.

McGraw says he never will forget the first game he played with Olean. Although only about 200 fans attended he felt more excited than at any time in his life. In describing his first game the popular leader of the Giants said:

"That first game was one of the greatest events in my life and I will remember it always. I was confident of making good until I went on the field.

"Then I was bewildered. It seemed that there were enough persons in the stands to populate the State of New York. I hoped that the batter would not hit the ball to me.

"When a grounder did come my way I felt as though I was rooted to the turf. I couldn't move. Finally—it seemed like an age to me—I got started and picked the ball up in my bare hand but threw it over the first baseman's head in my haste to beat the runner."

The error lost the game for McGraw's team but it did not discourage him. McGraw got $60 a month for playing with Olean

After one year with Olean he went to the Cedar Rapids club, where the remuneration was slightly better. While with the Iowa team there was a remarkable change for the better in his playing

He performed at shortstop and his playing there attracted the attention of a big league scout, and in August, 1891, he was signed by the Baltimore club, of the National League, then last in a twelve-club circuit.

Bill Barney was manager of the Orioles when McGraw broke into the "fast set." John finished the season of 1891 as a bench warmer.

In May, 1893, Ned Hanlon succeeded Barney and took a fancy to McGraw in spite of his small stature. First he tried him on second base where he showed much speed and skill. He was transferred to third where he played even more brilliantly and there he stuck

From that time until he withdrew from active service he was one of the best third basemen in the game, at one time being considered the top-notcher of them all. His ability to field bunts was uncanny, and no third baseman in the game ever has equalled him in that department. He always was a capable batter but under Hanlon's direction he became one of the greatest in baseball. For years his average never fell below the .350 mark and he was very fast on the bases. His all-around good work was a big factor in Baltimore's string of pennants.

While a member of the Orioles he was surrounded by a coterie of stars who helped to set off his brilliancy. Hughie Jennings, who now is associated with him in the direction of the Giants, and Wilbert Robinson, manager of the Brooklyns, were among them

McGraw and Robinson were sold in 1900 to the St. Louis club for a price reported to be $15,000. The sale displeased both men.

When the American League invaded the East in 1900, McGraw was one of the chief lieutenants of Ban Johnson, the league president. While they were still in St. Louis, McGraw and Robinson were planning to place an American League team in Baltimore. Finally McGraw obtained backing and assembled a good ball team. He was appointed manager of the club, which was a most popular move in Baltimore. and in 1901 there was not stauncher American leader than John McGraw, now the premier leader of the National League.

In 1902 there was an open split between McGraw and Johnson Not only were the Orioles weakened by suspensions but many players were retired with injuries. McGraw was sulked three times in 1902, the last causing an ugly wound in his knee, which practically ended his days as an active participant in the game. In mid-season the affairs of the Baltimore team became so demoralized that McGraw quit and announced that he was through with the game forever.

About this time the Giants were going poorly. It was during the Early Selee regime The team had had ball and the fans were not attending the games. McGraw's name was suggested to Freedman and he placed him in command of the team on July 10. He has led the Giants since

When McGraw came to New York the Polo Grounds seated 16,000 persons. Now it seats 38 000 and frequently on big days the club is compelled to close the gates. The New York club considers John McGraw such a valuable asset that they had his life insured for $100,000. The following table shows how McGraw's team has finished in the National League since he took hold.

By HUGH FULLERTON

Well, you Yankee fans, I feel sorry, but the Grand Old Dope declares that you are going to lose There is no mistaking the language of the dope It declares that several things will happen never before happened in baseball will happen in this series which starts today

It declares plainly that the Yanks will win the opening game—and the history of the World's Series has been that in almost every case the team winning the first game of the series won the set. The dope also, and even more plainly, predicts that the Yanks will not only win the first, but will sweep away the Giants in the second.

• • •

It looks as if the Yankees are going to start with a roar of enthusiasm and wind up with a roar of disappointment.

• • •

It is an odd series to dope. In the first place there is small use studying any of the pitchers save three on each team. The Giants must force use the three who have carried them to victory. Nehf, Toney and Douglas. And of these, all things considered, we must figure Shuffle Phil Douglas as the most dangerous to the Yankees

The Yanks will use Mays, although he is not quite at the top of his game and has been used hard and often in the closing days of the campaign to cinch the flag. Next of course, comes Waite Hoyt, the kid who is beyond all doubt a wonder but whose style is far more familiar to the Giants than that of Mays

The strength of Mays against the Giants cannot be overestimated in spite of his recent slump in form, due largely to too much work. He has a style which is entirely different from anything in the National, and he has plenty of stuff to back up that peculiarity

Oddly enough, if you recall it, Fred Toney, now one of the chief hopes of the Giants in this series was at one time first baseball exactly the same style of pitcher as Mays, pitching his "swift" underhand and everything from near his knees

Frank Chance forced him to learn a curve and to pitch overhand part of the time, and later he developed a puzzling sort of a slow curve which, mixed with his "swift" (which is pitcher's "nomlip" to waste), is a best asset against the Yanks.

When Mays and Hoyt have shot their first shots at the Giants the Yanks face a dilemma—for Harper is not ready in the new role in which Uhle, balked them in the Cleveland series.

HOW CLEVELAND WON SERIES IN 1920

Coveleskie Hero as Speaker's Men Smashed Way to Victory

Baseball fans throughout the land have started their annual chatter-box, the speculative forerunner of every World's Series, the post-season classic of the national pastime. Patrons of the sport are predicting one of the greatest series in history.

An average of 25,749 persons attended each game in the seven-game series played last year between the Brooklyn Nationals and the Cleveland Americans. The American League team led by the famous Tris Speaker, defeated Brooklyn five out of the seven games. Three contests were played in Brooklyn and four in Cleveland.

Stanley Coveleskie won three games for Cleveland, the first, fourth and seventh, and gave but two bases on balls in all of them. He allowed the Brooklyn batters five hits in the first game, one of which was a two-bagger by Zack Wheat. In the second game he also allowed five hits, one of which was a two-bagger by Griffith, the Brooklyn right gardner Thetbird was also the five-hit game, with no extra-base wallops.

The most striking feature of the series was the triple play made by Wambsganss, unassisted in the fifth game played at Cleveland on October 10. Wambsganss, Mitchell's line drive, touched second from which Kilduff had started for third, then touched Miller in person as he raced toward second.

Joe Oleon, Brooklyn shortstop, Pete Kilduff, Brooklyn second baseman and Wamby, Cleveland second sacker, went through the series without an error Olson had twelve putouts and twenty assists; Kilduff fifteen putouts and twenty-eight assists; Wamby twenty-two putouts and seventeen assists.

Sherrod Smith hurled two games for Brooklyn and allowed but one run in each. Both seconds beat him by that one lone tally in the sixth game at Cleveland

Elmer Smith, the Cleveland's right fielder, sent the ball sailing over the right field wall in the fifth game, at Cleveland, scoring three ahead of him All of those who crossed the plate before Smith hit safely and Cleveland earned four runs in the first inning

The tenth annual field day of Division 2, A. O. H. will be held on Russell Field, North Cambridge, on Columbus Day. The Kerry football team of New York will play the Cork football team of this city for the National championship.

In addition to the football match three leading hurling teams of Greater Boston will play for the championship of New England, the team of Charlestown will line up against the Wolfe Tones of South Boston. The winners will play the Young Irelands of Cambridge.

CHARLESTOWN FAN FIRST IN RUSH LINE

John McGinnis of Charlestown was one of the first to secure a rush seat to the World's Series after an all night watch. Higgins took a week off from his work at the Charlestown Navy Yard to see the series. He declares the Yanks will win, and that Ruth will crack out six homers.

upon which to finish, and, second, because the Giants will settle as they grow more accustomed to the style of the Yanks and then the class in the little fine points will tell.

There is one thing which bothers me a bit, and that is this: Who knows, of course, that the dope is predicated upon selection of pitchers. There is a chance that one manager or the other can make or break the series merely by substituting pitchers and outguessing the opposing team.

• • •

I want to say this: That every World's Series in the last two decades has been won and lost by seven or eight pitchers, and more than half of these would have been changed early had managers of teams obviously weaker than their opponents switched pitchers to fit the emergency.

In the present series there is a big chance for the Giants to win it more quickly than they otherwise would do by changing the obvious rotation of pitchers and using a fellow who does not figure at all save as a reserve to change pitcher.

In fact, he looks about the best bet the Giants have in this series. That is, if the Giants should switch he deal, open with Shea, the dope would go shimmering and the Giants would shorten the argay almost beyond doubt.

If there is a pitcher on the Giants team who figures to beat the Yankees it is Shea. That is, if there is anything in the way slow ball pitchers have stopped them this season, and especially in the manner in which

Rival Leaders Confident of Winning Series

JOHN McGRAW

(Manager of Giants)

A team that can do what the Giants did in winning the National League pennant can ride over any kind of opposition. Do I think we'll beat the Yanks? I most certainly do. I have supreme confidence in my players. They have morale. They are a smart, snappy brand of baseball. And they can hit, too. Watch them in the World's Series.

MILLER HUGGINS

(Manager of Yankees)

The Yanks will triumph in the World's Series. They are a great hitting and great fighting ball club. Confidence is half the battle, and they are filled with it. The Giants have a great club, but I feel sure the Yanks are greater in a short series.

DAVY BANCROFT

(Giant Captain)

We'll win. We'll fight 'em off their feet. Our pitchers will attend a "murderers' Row." The rest of us will attend to putting the wrinkles allies over. We've learned how to get up winning speed. We got it up now and we are ready for the series to start. The sooner the better

ROGER PECKINPAUGH

(Yankees' Captain)

Our club has the punch necessary to win a World's Series. Our batting order will tend to the run-making and our pitchers will hold their own and more with the Giants' stuff.

NEUILS WILL PLAY AGAINST ST. WILLIAM'S

"speaking of ham and eggs"

Thousands of men when they think of real value think of two things—ham-and-eggs and Cinco cigars.

You've seen countless people flounder around ten minutes over a menu and then order ham and eggs. And when a seasoned smoker gets lost in a confusion of brands he finally calls for Cinco.

Cinco cigars taste just right. Seventy years' experience and the sale of hundreds of millions annually has taught us what men like. Ham-and-eggs common sense is saying to thousands of men, "Stick to Cinco—it's safe."

Arthur Stringer's Studio Romance THE WINE OF LIFE Illustrated by James Montgomery Flagg

A Stirring Narrative of the Influence of Love on the Lives of a Girl and a Man of the Type That Fills a Big Niche in an Ever Changing Age

Storrow caught Vibbard by his Avenue de la Paix cravat, and slapped his face from side to side

Drawn by James Montgomery Flagg

The Story of an Ambitious Young Sculptor Who Comes to New York Hoping to Win His Way to Fortune in the Metropolis

THE ACTION SO FAR

Owen Storrow, a young sculptor, coming to New York to perfect himself in his art, meets Torrie Thrasel, a strikingly lovely girl, studying for the stage under the direction of Herman Krassler, a producer. Storrow saves his cousin, Charlotte Kirkner, from drowning, and she confesses her love for him. Later he marries Torrie, and on the advice of Chester Hardy, gives up sculpture and starts to write a novel of the North Country. Torrie, very angry when Storrow divulges their marriage, quarrels with her husband, then repents and contritely tells him she has given up her stage work and that he is the only thing that counts. Storrow has a talk with Krassler about his story and grows more tolerant of Torrie's friends. He hears that Vibbard, an artist who had lent Torrie the studio adjoining his own, is coming back. He has been keeping this knowledge from Torrie

STORROW found himself almost able to exult in this, for it meant that what was about to come would not come with too unnerving a facility. He also nursed a vague fear that the other man might in some way seek safety in flight. But pride was too strong, he was glad to see, in that gray-faced and slightly gaping-mouthed opponent who sensed to the full what was coming and preferred to face it without falling back. So strong was personal pride with Vibbard, in fact, that he essayed a futile and forlorn movement to save his face, even at the last.

"I suppose," he said in an exceptionally thin voice, "this is some new brand of American blackmail?"

It was a doubly unfortunate remark. And it proved to be the last one from Vibbard. It was a lash on the rawest flank of Storrow's overtried nerves, yet a lash which turned him aside from his intention of knocking the other man down, as he had decided to do.

He declined to bestow on his enemy even that qualified dignity. Instead, he caught Vibbard by the Avenue de la Paix cravat in which nestled his Place Vendome cameo and slapped his face, contorted with pallid and blood dotted, from side to side, as a kitten slaps a spool. It was a slap with the open hand, painful in impact, but doubly humiliating in its note of loathing condescension, of easy contempt.

A Wild Protest

When Vibbard attempted to clinch and save himself from this punishment Storrow fell to mauling the dandified body as he had once seen a prize fighter maul a hunting hound. And then Vibbard, driven to the natural extremity of the hopeless, fell to clawing and biting at his assailant. But that opposition was no longer necessary to the man who still wore a pair of slush-stained rubbers on his feet. He had smouldered for months with the Vesuvian fires that were now insisting on their release.

He was releasing in action the poisons which week by week he had kept within him, eating like acid. Bound inhibitions, stifled impulses, swarmed to the surface. The prolonged physical inactivity of a body active by instinct and training seemed to obliterate itself in one passionate and unreasoning surburst

He hated this soft-handed philanderer, this hunter of women. He even remembered what Hardy had once said to him, to the effect that every so-called lady's man stood dangerously, yet eternally kickable, stood always despicable, in the eyes of other men.

And then the reaction came

It came about the time that Torrie, standing narrow-eyed and breathless, finally gasped out: "Owen, you'll kill him! But Owen, it was plain, was swayed by no such fears. He remembered that it was not the first fist-fight into which he had been ushered because of the woman behind him. And it suddenly dawned on him as an absurd and unreasoning, bestial sort of business.

It was not the way, he knew, in which any problem worthy the name had ever been settled or ever could be settled. It merely deferred final issues and intoxicated with its false impression of triumph. It degraded life by giving fictitious value to the brutish thump of fist against opposing flesh. And he had known enough of it.

Storrow, with a sudden withering of hate which left him jiestless and heavy-hearted, picked his sodded opponent up bodily and dragged him to the door. Through that door, with a feeling of nausea as acutely physical as the mal de mer born of a rolling ship-deck, he flung the man with the blood-stained face

Then, dreading that Torrie's keen eye should behold the misery and weakness on his own face, he fabricated a sustaining appearance of ferocity and strode to the kitchenette tap, where he let the cold water run over his bruised knuckles.

"And I guess that settles Alan Vibbard for us," he proclaimed as he secretly steadied himself against the sink-edge

"But," began Torrie, almost in a whimper, but she did not continue. Storrow, however, seemed able to read her thoughts.

"If he comes back, I'll do the same thing over again," he announced, staring at the white-faced woman to see if any shadow of pity lurked in her eyes. But they were barricaded eyes, enigmatic, inscrutable, no longer touched with triumph.

And Alan Vibbard betrayed no intention of coming back Two days later a moving van backed up to the curb and three men, of whom the owner was not one, stripped the adjoining studio of its hangings and furniture and quite d'art. In the hallway Storrow happened to pass one of these men carrying in his arms a Russian samovar.

"A decent book isn't written, as a rule; it's rewritten," Chester Hardy had announced in extenuation of the somewhat sweeping changes which he had suggested to Storrow after going through the younger author's manuscript. And the truth of this came home to Storrow as he did what he could to carry out these suggestions. Even his final conviction that the older man was right did not serve to render his labor any less difficult and any less lugubrious.

Once persuaded that the issue was closed, that the work was complete, its reopening look on the nature of a post-mortem, proving almost as gloomy a bit of business as the reopening of a coffin. He was tired of the thing. The last of his enthusiasm seemed burned out, and the puppets of his creation, to his jaundiced eye, took on the soiled and faded aspect of counter goods too frequently handled.

Worked Doggedly

Storrow worked on his book doggedly, even in under difficulties. It began to tell a little, both on nerves and temper, for he found that he slept now only after a more and more substantial "nightcap." He also found Torrie's inconsequential comings and goings, her haphazard callers, her light-hearted lack of order, a provocation to quick and unreasoning irritability.

And this in turn reacted on Torrie, who remained in her carelessness. She became more and more silent, more and more self-contained

"If we're going to live in this dump," she announced one morning after journeying for the second time to the studio of a wall-paper artist on the second floor to answer telephone calls. "I've at least got to have a phone."

"Can we afford it?" queried Storrow, looking up from his typewriter, for only the night before they had taken up the matter of expenditure and her husband had awakened to the disturbing fact that he had been living beyond his income. He had remembered the even more disturbing fact that she had once protested that he would find her an expensive luxury

"If we can't stand that," retorted Torrie, "we may as well give up."

"Give up what?" asked Storrow trying to keep the note of alarm out of his voice.

Torrie shrugged a shoulder as she walked to the window.

"Give up pretending to be civilized" she replied with an obvious effort at moderation. But her cool look of disdain, as he sat staring at her with abstracted eyes, did not escape him.

"Yes, I think we'd better have a telephone put in," he acknowledged quietly, as he turned back to his work.

"Surely your book will bring you in something," ventured Torrie, touched by afterthought into a fleeting moment of remorse

"It ought at least to pay for a 'phone," acknowledged Storrow, with his attention already directed towards the page in front of him.

"Will you be through with it by a week from tomorrow?" he heard her asking

"Yes—with luck," he answered. "Why?"

Torrie slowly struck a match and lighted a cigarette.

"Because that happens to be my birthday, Lord and master, and Mattie Crowder's just warned me the bunch are going to spring a surprise party on us. Will you mind?"

He felt that there was a veiled note of mockery in her meekness. But it was so veiled that it left him touched with doubt.

"Of course I won't mind," he protested, "as long as I can be one of the party. And when this thing is cleared away, Torrie, we'll have more chances of getting a little fun out of life. And, speaking of that, let's go over to the Delia Robbia Room at the Vanderkiln for dinner tonight."

But Torrie shook her head.

"I couldn't enjoy it."

"Why not?" he demanded.

The answer is just one word, Owen, clothes"

Criticizes His Work

This seemed to puzzle him.

"Why, the last time we were there you enjoyed it. And you looked pretty good to me."

Torrie sat on the wide window-sill, viewing him with meditative eyes

I may have pretended to enjoy it, but I didn't. I don't think you realize, Owen, what clothes mean to a woman."

"In the matter of keeping her warm?" suggested Storrow, with an ironical matter-of-factness which Torrie decided to ignore.

"That may be all right for the woman you're writing about there," she said, with a head-nod towards his manuscript. "But the city woman doesn't wear clothes to keep warm. She wears clothes to make herself attractive and show that she's in the style. And that word style, my dear, is the biggest word in the American language. It stands for the biggest forces in all our world.

"The things you men think are so big, the things you call hunger and religion and honor and love, aren't even able to stand up beside it, in the long run. The right sort of clothes can give us women a glory we can't even get out of love. Knowing we're properly dressed can give us a peace of soul we can't possibly get out of religion."

Storrow sat confronting this coolly enunciated truth, wondering if men, after all, were destined forever to misjudge women, (were prompted eternally to attribute to them over-visionary ideals.

"But those Rialto ladies, as I remember 'em," he reminded his wife, "usually wear a diamond or two about the size of a salt-cellar"

"Yes, and not more than one in ten, of them the real thing" that's the pathetic part of it, the never-ending need of pretense. And it's just as pathetic when they are real, once you understand what they've gone without and given up to keep that solitary stone.

"For stage people, you see, have a childish belief that diamonds are always a good investment, even though the interest on what they borrow on them amounts to four per cent. a month, when it comes to the question of the pawn shop."

"It's just occurred to me that I've never given you a jewel in your life," he explained.

"You don't need to," Torrie replied

"And why not?"

"I guess I've got about all I can for," was her reply.

"I've never seen you wear them," he retorted

"I've been ashamed to," was her counter-retort.

"Are they so magnificent?"

How Do YOU Make Tea?

Best Way to Prepare Cup That Cheers.

THE dispute between an editor of the London Lancet and other tea makers, has widened until the Russians and Chinese are both involved.

The Oriental and the Slav unite in declaring that all others are wrong.

Says the Russian:

"The only way to make tea properly is to have your samovar properly hot. The water should be boiling hard Then chip off the required amount of brick tea and dissolve it in the boiling water Serve with the slice of a lemon, a piece of lime, or better still with lime and a dash of rum. Until you do this you will not know the full capabilities of tea as a real cup that cheers."

"Very all wrong," explained a Chinese merchant, his mind on the customs of the home land. "This is the way to make tea properly.

"Obtain a large china pot and a number of small cups. Into the pot place a tranch of tea—not the ground pulverised stuff you get here, but the plant as the Gods intended it should be. Pour upon this boiling water and be sure that it is freshly boiled each time. Allow it to stand for a few minutes, then pour into the small cups. As the water is poured off add more fresh-ly boiling water upon the tea branch. Drink without spoiling by adding milk, cream, lemon or rum. Tea of itself is sufficient."

To this the Japanese retorts:

"That method is all right as the others that have been told about here, such as the unspeakable way the Turks have of spoiling their tea and the worse manners of the Burmese, but the real way to make tea is

"Take the orange pekoe leaves, the leaves that come from near the top of the tea plant, which have been rolled, and properly treated. Place a few of them in a jug or pot and upon them pour boiling water. Then when waiting for the bitter taste of the tea to be drawn forth, pour into little cups and serve without sugar, milk or lemon. As the Chinese said, 'The Gods made tea good enough as it is without mixing with anything.'"

Chicken Salad

Boil a chicken weighing about three pounds until tender. No set time can be given for it depends on whether the chicken is young or old. Boil briskly, and when let cool in water in which it has been cooked. When cold, take off skin and remove bone. Cut meat into small pieces; salt and pepper to taste, and add one head of celery chopped fine, if in season. If not, use lettuce leaves and add two tablespoonfuls vinegar. When a Girl Marries

By Ann Lisle

Copyright, 1921, by King Feature Syndicate, Inc.

"WHY, Carl Booth!" I cried between vexation and amusement. "That isn't it—I just thought I'd grown, that I could best serve Haldane in some new capacity—"

I stopped in perplexity. Was a word of this true? Hadn't I hesitated from that old jaunbole attitude which finds expression in the child's "I won't play if I can't be president?" Or, on the other hand, had I been actuated by a queer hesitancy to work at Carl's side? Was I trying to avoid a business intimacy with the one good friend I'd brought out of my experience in the world of business? What perversity was driving me?

As I stood facing Carl's quizzical gaze, wondering how I'd square this with myself, the door opened abruptly and Miss Brownlow came in with a vexed smile crinkling her brows.

"The advertising department's in bad. Mr. Booth," she said "They need you to pull them out of an ugly hole. One of our big concerns is on the verge of cancellation Appears our client ordered a full page in four colors where he began to ask one of the little colleens how she was progressing at school. The usual questions as to the spelling of the interesting word "cat," and so forth were put and answered. Then the matter turned to a more abtruse subject. "Now, tell me, dear, what is a lake?" he asked. The little maid puckered her brows in thought for a moment. Then she said: "Please, yer riverence, it's a kettle wid a hole in it."

At this moment the door opened and in walked a harassed looking man, whom I took to be from the advertising department. With him was a familiar, squat figure. At a glance I recognized Max Hoadley of Hoadley-Hats—the hats customers evidently, who was about to cancel a big advertising contract and so put a blot on Carl's record, as editor of Haldine's.

"Hi-lo, Hi'o, Mrs. Harrison," cried Max Hoadley in the clubbiest of fashion. "What are you doing here, my dear? Didn't I tell you if you ever were in need of a job, you should come to me, and now from what the Brownlow lady said and finding you here and all, I guess you're trying to sell something here."

"Oh, no," I replied airily. "I've just come back to resume my position as secretary to the editor and general assistant to his whole department. So let's get right down to that matter of the advertising you're going to withdraw. I've still several minutes to spare before I go out to keep a luncheon appointment. Unless, of course, you'd rather wait until Mr. Booth finishes his business over the 'phone.'

"I'll deal with you," said Max Hoadley hoarsely, and making a gallant bow which landed him on what looked like the verge of a fit of apoplexy.

The harrassed looking man faded out of the room. Melted—in fact. Carl looked up from his telephone with a face which was a study in deliberate blankness

Sinking into the chair at the desk, I motioned the astonished Hoadley into the other chair the little room held. Then, flinging a glance back through the half open door at Carl, who had slumped down over the telephone, I said in my most business-like manner:

"Now, let's get at the facts, please.

A Romance in Which They Really Figured

By Kate McKinstry

JANET CANFIELD was undoubtedly a faddist. She had taken up all the "isms" in turn, and then she began on health fads. Gerald Canfield was in love with Janet, and it was Ella, his cousin, who tried to warn him

"She's no good and you're poor. Why, she doesn't know a thing about housework."

At first Gerald was inclined to be angry, but the more he thought of Ella's words the more serious he became. The momentous question had not been asked; perhaps Ella was right—a poor man ought to choose a wife who showed more housewifely instincts. And life looked rather bleak to him that evening as he started for the Canfield home.

Janet opened the door, instead of the housemaid, and, oddly enough, she was wearing the daintiest of little ruffled aprons. She seemed wonderfully vivacious, perhaps a trifle excited, but she was genuinely glad to see him

"Oh, we've had the most strenuous day!" she exclaimed, when he was seated in the cozy library "Our cook was taken desperately ill at ten o'clock, and had to go to the hospital, and an hour later our two housemaids—they are sisters—were telegraphed for to come home on account of illness."

Gerald politely expressed his sympathy, but the thought came to him, "Now, I wonder, if dear little Janet has been doing her part to make things comfortable for Mr. and Mrs. Canfield." He glanced at Miss Canfield's hands; they were as red and shriveled as his cousin Ella's ever were, and a feeling of absolute joy came to him at the thought that the lovely girl opposite him had not disdained washing the dishes! Thereupon Gerald found courage to take one of the little red hands in his, and ask its sweet owner if he might keep it forever.

The marriage proved an ideally happy one, a fact which always puzzled Ella Underwood, and one day she half hinted to Gerald her surprise over the matter

Whereupon Gerald explained about the dish washing and the red hands the evening he had proposed.

Then Ella began to laugh "Mr. Sherlock Holmes, I fancy I can explain that better," she said. "It was just at the time when she was following Dr. Cure's advice to nervous people, to put the hands into hot water up to the wrists whenever anything upsetting or exciting happened to them. She seemed wonderfully vivacious, perhaps a trifle excited, but she was genuinely glad to see him

"Oh, we've had the most strenuous day!" she exclaimed, when he was seated in the cozy library "Our cook was taken desperately ill at ten o'clock, and had to go to the hospital, and an hour later our two housema.ds—they are sisters —were telegraphed for to come home on account of illness."

Gerald politely expressed his sympathy, but the thought came to him, "Now, I wonder, if dear little Janet has been doing her part to make things comfortable for Mr. and Mrs. Canfield." He glanced at Miss Canfield's hands; they were as red and shriveled as his cousin

BE PRETTY! TURN GRAY HAIR DARK

Try Grandmother's Old Favorite Recipe of Sage Tea and Sulphur

Almost everyone knows that Sage Tea and Sulphur, properly compounded, brings back the natural color and lustre to the hair when faded, streaked or gray. Years ago the only way to get this mixture was to make it at home, which is musty and troublesome. Nowadays, by asking at any drug store for "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound," you will get a large bottle of this famous old recipe, improved by the addition of other ingredients, at a small cost.

Don't stay gray! Try it! No one can possibly tell that you darkened your hair, as it does it so naturally and evenly. You dampen a sponge or soft brush with it, and draw the hair through your hair, taking one small strand at a time; by morning the gray hair disappears, and after another application or two, your hair becomes beautifully dark, glossy and attractive.—Advertisement.

EAT LESS MEAT IF BACK HURTS

Take a glass of Salts to Flush Kidneys if bladder bothers you

Eating meat regularly eventually produces kidney trouble in some form or other, says a well-known authority, because the uric acid in meat excites the kidneys, they become overworked; get sluggish; clog up and cause all sorts of distress, particularly backache and misery in the kidney region; rheumatic twinges, severe headaches, acid stomach, constipation, torpid liver, sleeplessness, bladder and urinary irritation.

The moment your back hurts or kidneys aren't acting right, or if bladder bothers you get about four ounces of Jad Salts from any good pharmacy; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast and in a few days your kidneys will then act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to flush clogged kidneys and stimulate them to normal activity; also to neutralize the acids in the urine so it no longer irritates, thus ending bladder disorders.

Jad Salts cannot injure anyone; makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink which millions of men and women take now and then to keep the kidneys and urinary organs clean, thus avoiding serious kidney disease.—Advertisement.

Stocks Recede in New York; Trading Is Active; Call Rate Falls to 4 Per Cent.

FINANCE AND BUSINESS

By B. C. FORBES.

Think of this: Irenee du Pont, president of the great Du Pont enterprises, with headquarters in Wilmington, Del., informs me that they have been buying only one-half the material and supplies which have gone into their total sales. The other half has been drawn from stocks formerly on hand.

President Du Pont adds: "It is perfectly clear that, if the Du Pont Company uses materials and supplies from the wholesalers, those who sell the Du Pont Company have a reduction in volume of sales exactly equal to our reduction in inventories. When everybody is doing the same thing, it is quite clear that the general volume of sales must enormously decrease, consequently, factories shut down or create excessive stocks which they cannot finance. When the factories close down, the workman is left idle."

* * *

That is the first half of the picture. Here is the second half of the picture, the half we see now beginning to paint:

"By the same token," adds Mr. Du Pont, "if everybody has used up their material and supplies, or rather has reduced them to the minimum which could be decreased, then they must start buying and business is bound to pick up. The turn will probably be more abrupt than expected, and is likely to be much more abrupt than anyone has suggested, for, if the purchasing power of the ultimate consumer has not been seriously hurt, the factories are going to wake up to the fact that there is no longer a sufficient supply of materials and intermediates for them to run full, whereas the demand may very readily reach normal within a very short time."

* * *

Isn't this exactly what almost every concern in America has been doing, using up its inventories and thus staying out of the market for materials and supplies? Manufacturers correctly concluded more than a year ago that prices were bound to fall. Just as there was a "buyers' strike" among the public, so there developed what was equal to a buyers' strike all along the business and industrial line. Merchants stopped stocking up. So did manufacturers. So did the railroads. So did investors. So did everybody else.

* * *

But there is a limit to the time one can live on one's fat, so to speak. Even the largest inventories diminish towards the vanishing point if everything is going out and nothing coming in. The more thoroughgoing investigations have been conducted of late to ascertain the extent of stocks of goods on hand throughout the country. In almost every instance the same result has been established, namely, that stocks on hand are abnormally low.

* * *

This being so, there isn't room for much doubt over what is likely to happen. The vast majority of the 24,351,676 families in the United States have been living in a normal way and consuming almost a normal amount during the last eighteen months. Exports during the same period have been far above the pre-war normal. Production, on the other hand, has been drastically curtailed in almost every direction. The consequence is that we have almost, if not quite, reached the point where a sudden buying of the production must inevitably develop on a new scale, a very much broader scale.

* * *

Indeed, symptoms of this are already appearing. They have appeared in cotton goods, in certain woolen goods, in several steel products, in some qualities of lumber, to a slight degree in copper, in furs, in cotton, in crude oil, etc.

They are bound to materialize in other directions before long. Those engaged below the cost of production —in rubber, for example.

* * *

These are facts and considerations which no forward-looking business man can afford to omit from his reckoning in trying to analyze what lies ahead.

* * *

Nor must those interested in securities overlook them.

FOX DANCE HALL PANIC REPORT ERRONEOUS

Patrons Left Hall in Orderly Manner After Two Quarrelsome Men Were Arrested

In an account carried in the Boston American of Sept. 27 it was made to appear, through error, that a panic had followed a fight in the Fox dance hall on Columbia road, near Upham's Corner, Dorchester, and that many persons were injured in the excitement.

That the panic never occurred was proven in evidence at the trial of John Carey of Howell street, Dorchester, and Peter Moran of Central avenue, Milton, the two men charged with starting the fight.

Patrolman Griffin, who was stationed in the hall, testified that everything was peaceful until Carey and Moran started trouble and that they were promptly arrested.

Tony Maniglia, Murray, attorneys for Michael Fox, proprietor of the hall, have called attention of the Boston American to the mistake.

Fuller investigation has shown that there was no panic, and that the affair was simply a fight between two alleged disturbers, as it was nearly time for the dance to end, anyway. Fox suggested that the hall be closed for the night, which was done. The crowd left in an orderly manner.

The Boston American is glad to make this correction.

Subscriptions to Irish Loan Sought in Buenos Aires

By Associated Press

Buenos Aires, Oct. 5—Subscriptions to a loan for the "Elected Government of the Republic of Ireland" were invited by advertisements published here today by the "Diplomatic Mission of the Irish Republic."

This commission, headed by Laurence Ginnell, offered certificates in denominations ranging from 10 to 10,000 pesos. These were not negotiable, but on presentation at the treasury of the republic one month after international recognition is extended, would be exchangeable for gold bonds carrying five per cent. interest.

The loan would carry interest from the first day of the seventh month after the liberation of the territory of the Irish Republic from British military control."

MARY GARDEN TO WEAR MOST EXPENSIVE SHOES

Paris, Oct. 5—The most expensive shoes ever made will be worn by Mary Garden on the return to the United States on October 15.

The inventor of the idea of wearing lace up the sides of ladies' boots, which was popular several years ago, was invited to a fitting room for ingraining the petals of orchids and other flowers in the leather.

The result is a permanent effect and is reported to be so exquisite that Miss Garden has ordered a dozen pairs.

DE VALERA HAS BACKING OF ALL, SAYS WALSH

'There Isn't a Note of Discord' in Sinn Fein Element, Is American's Report

Further evidence of the unanimity of the Irish people in their fight for freedom is presented by Mr. Walsh in the following article: He tells of the conversion of the older leaders, long committed to home rule, to the principles of Sinn Fein. Mr. Walsh, who recently returned from Ireland, where he was in conference with De Valera, was formerly chairman of the Federal War Labor Board.

By FRANK P. WALSH
(Written Exposely for Universal Service.)

New York, Oct. 5—There is not a note of discord among the Irish Republican forces. There is not a note of discord among the Irish people. Only one voice is heard outside the voice of the Irish people, and that is the voice of the British military force.

Let me call as a witness one Stephen O'Mara, father of James O'Mara, who is now a member of the Parliament of Ireland, and also father of Stephen O'Mara, Jr., in charge of Irish affairs for the Irish Republic. Before leaving O'Mara, the Sinn Fein Lord Mayor of Limerick.

Stephen O'Mara, Sr., now nearly eighty years old, was and is one of the big men of Ireland. He is the founder and owner of O'Mara Limited, the company that exports the finest Irish hams and bacon to all the world. A vigorous, alert, capable old gentleman. You'd like him.

This man was a Nationalist member of the British Parliament, as was his son James. He was the treasurer of the Parnell fund. Outside the dominant figures like Parnell, Davitt and Healey, he was second to none in Irish leadership.

Yet this man, a home ruler for decades, told me:

"De Valera and his associates proved that home rule had been wrong for forty years and could never be right. We wanted Ulster. Those precious years fighting for freedom along the wrong lines, and this man, De Valera, showed us the folly of courses in a year. We of the older generation can only stand before them, hats in hands, asking how we can help, thanking God for what they have done."

Then I met Alderman Flanagan, whose name may mean little to many in America, but who is one of the powerful men of Ireland. This man is more than ninety years old, and for sixty years he has been the largest shipper of agricultural produce in Ireland. His house is virtually a palace, just outside Dublin, near Rath.

A fine, splendid old Irishman he is and ever a fighter for liberty. Mr. Flanagan told me that he could only give thanks that he had lived to see the day when the young men of Ireland, like De Valera and his associates, had taken over the government of their country for the people of the country.

HARDING TO BE URGED TO IRISH RECOGNITION

A. A. R. I. R. in Mass Meeting at Dudley Street and Harrison Ave. Tonight

President Harding is called upon to "recognize the Republic of Ireland, proclaiming to the world that America is loyal to its principles, stands by her war pledges and gladly pays its debts." In resolutions to be formally adopted at a public mass meeting tonight at the corner of Dudley street and Harrison avenue under the auspices of the Eleventh Congressional District of the American Association for Recognition of the Irish Republic.

Copies will also be sent Senators Lodge and Walsh and Lloyd George and Eamon De Valera, President of the Irish Republic.

Martin Mulroy will preside at the meeting, which will be addressed by Dr. Walter E. Holloway and others.

The Fenross bill is denounced on the ground that it is against the American people already overburdened with taxation, inasmuch as the bill seeks control over funding of war debts, principal and interest due this country from England and her allies.

General and economic distress, with 6,000,000 idle, of which 750,000 are World War veterans, is deplored, and the appointment of a relief board and assist American industries by purchase of American goods and by patronizing American enterprises.

The resolutions favor world peace and peace conferences, declaring that though warning against any aggressment which may entrench England in its supremacy of the seas and the entrance of this country into a League of Nations pact.

As a test of good faith and sincerity, England is called upon to fulfil her pledges "withdraw its army of occupation from Ireland, and recognize the Republic of Ireland."

The resolve concludes with:

"We commend the Irish people and their representatives in the Dail Eireann for steadfast adhesion to the rights of self-government and the manner and form of their own government; we deplore the inadequate offer of settlement submitted by Lloyd George to the Irish people; we hope and pray that, peacefully if possible, by force of arms if necessary, Ireland will speedily assume her proper position among the nations of the world."

Ban on Girl Visitors Now "Imperative" At Harvard

The Harvard authorities have changed the gentle "should" to the imperative "may" in one of their important college regulations relating to women.

For a number of years the regulation has read that young women without the chaperon of an older woman SHOULD not be received in a student's room. This Fall the "should" has been replaced by "may."

The Crimson editorially commenting on the change declares:

"Men of Harvard, despair of hope! The fatal symptom has not been mistaken. The oldest college in America has reached the apex of its glory. We can now only pray that its period of decadence be as long drawn out as was Rome's."

DELAWANA HAS ENTERED IN TRIAL RACES

Seven Nova Scotia Schooners Seek Place as Fisher's Cup Contender

Halifax, Oct. 5.—Seven schooners have now been entered for the Nova Scotia fishermen's race elimination series, including the Delawana, which lost to the Esperanto last year. Her entry was made yesterday and replaces the W. C. Smith, which was entered on Monday.

The Uda R. Cookman is the seventh entry and several others are expected. The Mowser, now at Porto Rico, may race if she returns in time.

J. Henry Hunt, who came to Halifax in the interests of the Mayflower, left yesterday for Boston. The race committee held a meeting, but no statement was given out whether the Mayflower was discussed. If she was, it is believed that the committee only reaffirmed their decision barring her from the international contests.

Mothers, Keep Your Babies' Hands Covered

And Train Them From the Beginning to Keep Their Fingers Out of Their Mouths

Copyright, 1921, Star Company

Millions of mothers worry because "there is something wrong with the child's stomach."

Digestion is bad, sleep is irregular, the lips are crackled, unhealthy looking—there are signs of the dreaded colitis, which takes so many thousands of children to the grave.

The problem of mothers is hard and painful at best. False diet, foolish feeding based on ignorance, AND EATING AT IRREGULAR HOURS, menace the health of many children.

The mother that has lost one child or more lives in constant apprehension, and is almost in despair when signs of illness show themselves.

We want today to impress upon all mothers ONE THING THAT THEY CAN DO FOR THEIR CHILDREN.

One of the most famous and one of the ablest doctors in New York was called in by a mother to take care of a child that showed signs of illness, and his first question was this:

Does your baby put its fingers in its mouth a great deal?

He then impressed upon the mother—her child was not quite two years old—that she must above all things prevent her baby from putting dirty fingers into its mouth.

And this is the idea that we want to impress upon all mothers TODAY, and that without putting them to the expense of seeing the doctor quoted above. From him a few words of advice would cost $25.

Remember that children are sometimes poisoned by disease germs IN THEIR FOOD.

But FAR OFTENER THEY ARE POISONED BY GERMS STICKING TO THEIR FINGERS WHICH THEY PUT INTO THEIR MOUTHS.

It doesn't matter how careful you may be, your child is bound to creep on the floor, to fall down upon its hands on the sidewalk, to grasp railings, etc.

Whenever a child's hands touch the sidewalks, or railings, or the floor, THEY ARE APT TO COME IN CONTACT WITH GERMS THAT PRODUCE DISEASE.

It is impossible to keep children shut in. It is impossible to keep them from the parks and the streets and from crawling about on the floor.

BUT IT IS POSSIBLE TO PROTECT THEM.

To the mother whom we have mentioned the able doctor said:

Keeping your child's hands washed frequently is a good thing—but it is no protection.

Keep COTTON GLOVES ON THE CHILD'S HANDS when it is playing anywhere outside of its nursery—and, better still, keep them on also when it plays on the nursery floor.

A child will not put cotton gloves into its mouth—it doesn't like the feeling.

There is very simple advice for mothers that worry about their children's health.

If your baby is in the teething stage, you know how the wise old mothers will tell you that you must EXPECT trouble at that time.

You are told that teething affects the stomach and causes sickness, bowel complaints, etc.

Teething DOES affect the child's DIGESTION, but it does not actually introduce into its system the germs that produce disease, such as the dreaded Summer complaint.

Children are subject to disease especially when teething, BECAUSE WHEN TEETHING THEY ALWAYS HAVE THEIR FINGERS IN THEIR MOUTHS, and they are always introducing dangerous germs into their systems in that way.

Two pairs of cotton gloves for the baby would not cost very much—and we wish that the managers of big stores would put such gloves on sale as an act of public usefulness, and advertise them at the very lowest possible price.

We shall be glad to call particular attention to such as may advertise such gloves for babies in this newspaper at prices that the poorest mother can afford.

The washing of the gloves and stretching of the gloves is no great labor—it may save you many long hours and nights of watching with a sick baby.

Occasionally a child suffering from teething will put its fingers in its mouth in spite of wearing cotton gloves. In such a case very rough woolen gloves may be procured that will certainly answer the purpose.

Mothers can do much, also, by making it a habit from the baby's first day to train it to keep its fingers out of its mouth.

A gentle touch of the hand each time that the little fingers are put toward the lips will gradually accustom the child to the notion that its hands and its mouth must be kept separate.

Meanwhile we advise mothers of children under five years of age—and, better still, up to seven years of age—to try this experiment of keeping them gloved with cotton when they play on park sidewalks or street sidewalks exposed to disease germs.

P. S.—Some mothers will say: "Well, my baby always had his hands in his mouth, and HE didn't have gloves, and HE didn't get any disease."

We are glad to hear it. But what is true of one child is not true of another. And what is true of a child one day is not true of the same child ANOTHER DAY.

A child absolutely healthy and strong is able to throw off and get rid of the disease germs that get into his system. A perfectly healthy child with a heart acting strongly and the blood in good condition could swallow a good many tuberculosis germs without getting consumption.

But as soon as something happens, when the vitality is low, the heart action feeble, THE GERMS ARE NOT THROWN OFF. They establish a foothold, they breed with lightning rapidity, and then it is too late to save the child. Prevention is better than cure, and there is no better prevention than keeping the child's own hands from putting disease into its mouth.

Bar Communists From Office

BERLIN, Oct. 5.—Nearly all European countries grant their citizens a degree of freedom of speech quite unknown in the United States.

Despite this, however, it is interesting to note how one State after another, while making as few inroads on freedom of speech and the press as possible, is nevertheless being driven to draw the teeth of the Communists.

Some months ago the Minister of the Interior of Prussia decreed that Communists, while they might be honorable and well-meaning men and women, could nevertheless not be permitted to hold responsible official positions in the State's administrative or executive bodies.

Now it is Jugo-Slavia that proposes to bar members of the party from all public offices. The government has laid before the Legislature the draft of a proposed "law for the protection of the State." Originally aimed chiefly at anarchist propaganda and the advocacy of the violent overthrow of the State, the measure has been recast to cover Communist propaganda.

DEBT AND COMMON SENSE

Are you going deeper and deeper in debt because you are endeavoring to live as you did while your income was a third, perhaps, larger than at present?

Naturally you dislike to drop out of the crowd in which you were able to mingle when your salary was larger, and you still like to enjoy the same luxuries which your "more money period" made possible.

But you are convinced that you cannot spend as much as you did, and meet your obligations, so is it not time for you to call a halt?

Retrench your living within your means and have peace in your heart, rather than have to dodge the collector at home and outside.

Eventually you will have to drop out in disgrace, for how would you feel to have your possessions taken from you one by one for debts which you owe.

If you are running behind and you see no way to increase your income honestly, is it not foolish for you to go on as you are?

You cannot make two incomes out of your one—better retrench.

Our Boy Veterans

"YES," said the tall lad with the crispy hair and the big blue eyes that were, somehow, like the eyes of a child who has been frightened.

"Yes, we soon found it wasn't much of a picnic."

And he leaned forward and looked deep into the fire that leaped upon the hearth and did its best to take the chill off the foggy evening without warming the room overmuch.

"There was once a dugout, one that Fritz left behind him—admite of a place it was, and there were ten of us crowded in it.

"We slept, each of us, on a narrow shelf, like bunks on a ship, only much closer together, and we were thirty feet underground and there wasn't much air. Many a time I wished I was out in No Man's Land just to get a breath and take a chance.

"There was a lot of Fritzi's stuff in one corner of the dugout. We didn't care to mess about in it and we let it strictly alone. But on the tenth day, one of our chaps saw some equipment or something over in the corner, and thought he might as well get hold of it—and we found that there was something in the equipment—something that had once been a man. And we had been in that place ten days and ten nights and never knew it."

Do You Know Others?

"Oh!" said the mother of the tall lad.

"What horrors!" said the sister, and the rest of us gasped and said nothing at all.

"Yet there was a kind of fascination about the life, too," said the tall lad. "Whenever I had my leave and went over to England, we had a lot of fun—theatres and pictures, and pretty girls and parties and things. It was all part of the game. We slept in beautiful beds in noble castles, we drank tea with duchesses, and were introduced to the Queen. But after a bit of it we got homesick for the regiment and the trenches and the bite and sting of the excitement.

"And sometimes even now——"

The tall lad's mother's eyes filled with tears.

"Don't!" she said. "Don't, lad." And we talked of something else.

But afterward, when we were quiet together, the lad's mother and I, she said:

"So that's what he's thinking of when he sits and looks straight ahead of him and doesn't hear when we speak to him."

"How they ever lived through it all!" I sighed. "And yet we expect them to come back and be the same as they were before."

I'm sorry the tall lad opened his heart to us for once, and told us that dreadful story, and yet, in a way, I am glad.

I think I shall have more patience and understand a little better the next time one of our boys who went through that purgatory begins to act restless and unsettled and as if he didn't know quite what to do with himself.

Jazz tunes, racing motor cars, the dip of death in the airplane—is it any wonder their poor abused nerves ache for something like this?

Patience Will Win

"I hate to see one of these Legion boys bringing his girl down to take a swim," said the coast guard to me the other day.

"They're bound and determined to risk their lives—it seems as if they can't be happy without danger."

Poor fellows, dear brothers of our own blood—how can we ever hope to understand them fully—we who sat safe and sane at home, while they lived in the midst of madness and such frenzied horror as we dare not even try to imagine?

Patience, patience—always patience. Love, tenderness, the simple routine of simple home and simple life—these are the medicines for the disease of cruel restlessness and vague misery which the war left behind it.

Let's try to administer them whenever and wherever we can.

Letters to the Editor

Pick Americans

Editor Boston American:

The way to help the unemployed is to run two shifts in work places, and Americans should be given the first chance. The trouble in this country is that American citizens are not given the preference in getting employment. This has been done on the steamship George Washington, where they discharged 200 Chinese and others to give employment to Americans.

There are many men employed who should be discharged and Americans put out of work given their places. ROBERT BRUCE.

Landlord Promises

Editor Boston American:

Is there no way to stop grabbing landlords from raising rents under the pretense of property taxes which do not seem to go up as fast as rent advances? Many do no repairing or cleaning, but promises are plentiful. It's a crime where wages are lower and children must be raised. What will our children be? What are we saved for?

AMERICAN EMBRACES SPIRIT OF FREEDOM

By Dr. Charles Fleischer.

YOUR true American is a living embodiment of the Declaration of Independence! He is the throbbing incarnation of self-respect, the vital epitome of self-sufficiency.

To all the past, his spirit sends a grateful greeting, and sings the announcement: I thank you, but I also am a Man!

His present setting he appreciates, but so responsibly that he is bound to add thereto his individual contribution.

With all the wonder-work inaugurated and accomplished by that immortal document, the incalculable spiritual implications of the Declaration still remain to be developed.

Like the shot fired by the embattled farmers at Concord, its reverberations continue to be heard 'round the world; and all that is implied therein sounds summoning music in our souls.

Deathless Portion

The Declaration is a deathless portion of our American Scriptures and is sure to be interpreted by, and applied to, the minds and lives of the countless generations of Americans still to come.

For this moment's purpose of our essay, we want the shining suggestion of only a single facet of our myriad-faced jewel.

And that is the aspect which brings us the personal inspiration of the Ideal of Self-Sufficiency.

When the Revolutionary Fathers declared their independence of the Mother Country, they were not mere-common-garden-variety rebels against constituted authority, but they proclaimed to the world an immortal Idea.

The American Idea is: That in Man resides Authority; that Power is self-derived; that each Age, each People, each Person is Self-Sufficient!

To each American of us, that assertion must bring such boundless and active self-respect as to make us a worthy integer of a civilization which, ideally, is based upon respect for the Individual.

Therefore, to be a true American, really a living embodiment of the Declaration, you must believe in yourself sufficiently to be yourself; you must respect yourself enough to think, speak, and act for yourself.

To Be Sufficient

You should have sufficient regard for your spiritual resources to be sufficient to yourself.

If you were more nearly self-sufficient, you would not be so concerned, before you express your own opinion, to discover whether it would accord with the popular opinion.

Self-sufficient self-respect does not worry about being a minority. It knows that everlastingly an honest One and God are a majority!

If you were more nearly self-sufficient, you would not forever be running away from yourself, to theatres, dances, dinners, diversions—anything, everything, if only it will take you away from yourself, out of yourself, to help you jazz your way through life, instead of living your way through responsibility, masterfully.

Self-sufficiency invites you to stay at home with the cause—You being the Cause! It asks you to become acquainted with yourself, your powers, your resources. Not even books, whether commonplace or good—in which latter case they may well be called the Great Companions—are necessary always.

Wiser and Braver

If we were wiser and braver, and, therefore, unafraid of ourselves, we could often rise to such height of self-reverence (no, not self-worship!) as to arrive at our very Holy of Holies.

There we win the illuminations and the blessings which reside in sweet, strong solitude.

These are for even the humblest of us. And for the greatest there flow thence the eternal revelations of the Eternal!

Try the process yourself, dear reader, for you will find it more refreshing than a vacation, more revealing than many a generally recognized means.

Such assertion of self-sufficiency is not negatively rebellious.

Like the revolutionary act of 1776, it announces—simply and irresistibly—the fact of Your Self-Dependence!

WHY CERTAINLY!

If flies are flies because they fly,
And ties are ties because they tie,
Then are fleas fleas because they flee,
And are bees bees because they be?

"What of it?"

"I wonder if that means a ravine or a lot to eat?"

TRAINING IS NEEDED BY FARMERS IN FRANCE

By Garrett P. Serviss

WHEN Arthur Young, the Irish agriculturist, while the first stir of the great revolution of 1789 was already beginning, rode on horseback throughout France, from the English Channel to the Pyrenees, for the purpose of studying its art and science of cultivating the soil, he paid a tribute, which today would be even more deserved, to the skill and practical knowledge of the French farmers.

In this time, however, the lands of France were held by the lords, while the workers, who owned nothing, loved the soil purely for its own sake, as they loved the air that they breathed and the sky that bent over them.

Today the workers themselves are owners and free men, and their skill and knowledge are the better for not being acquired and exercised under, or rather in spite of the lash.

Expert Teaching Needed

Yet, at the present time, according to French authorities, the chief want of French agriculture is expert teaching, beginning in youth. This want has arisen from that common cause of stimulation which the whole world has felt in recent years, viz., the enormous progress of science in every direction. Rule of thumb methods will no longer suffice to meet the increasing needs of a planet whose inhabitants are constantly growing in number, although the superfices of their globe cannot be stretched beyond the fixed 200,000,000 square miles, and the melancholy oceans are undrainable. Since the earth cannot expand, man himself must become greater in his capacity to make the earth productive. Education is the plough of human capacity.

I read in the Mercure de France that Germany has more than 100,000 students who receive formal technical instruction in agriculture, while France, whose agricultural population is 15,000,000, has only 2,000 such students.

Three Classes of Instruction

To remedy this situation, by the law of August 2 1918 and the decree of June 23 1920, three classes of agricultural instruction were provided for. They are: First, superior instruction to be given in the National Agronomic Institute; second, secondary instruction to be given in three special schools, at Grignon, at Montpellier and at Rennes; third, primary instruction to be given in practical schools, farm schools, seasonal schools and post-graduate courses.

But, as the Mercure complains, this is not enough, and does not aim in the right direction. "Professional education in agriculture," it says, "ought not to be the privilege of a small number, but should be placed before all who are called upon to follow that occupation."

To achieve this aim, the instruction should begin in all the primary schools and be continued through the higher grades. A sagacious old "paysan" is quoted as saying, with bitterness:

"You have no idea how the obligatory teaching now given in the primary schools has turned the heads of the people away from the cultivation of the land. As soon as a pupil shows in school more than ordinary intelligence they steer him away from the occupation of his fathers."

Must Teach the Teachers

But the first step needed is to teach the teachers, for they all follow the ancient pedagogic ideas and methods. The Mercure proposes that the kind of instruction given in the country schools should be varied from that of the city schools in accordance with the special interests and needs of the population served. This, of course, does not mean that any of the universal elements of all instruction should be changed or omitted, but that the teaching "should be suited to the origin of the pupil and to the environment in which he is brought up."

This idea finds strong advocates. "Reform the rural schools," writes Robert Morin, "in such manner that agricultural science shall occupy in them the large place it deserves, and so that schools situated amidst the harvest fields and the vineyards shall not have for their role the uprooting of the young cultivators from the soil that needs their care."

And Jean Terrel says: "Every primary rural school, without being a special school of agriculture, ought to be preparatory, shaping the children of the country from the outset of their instruction toward rural life and love of the land."

Thoughtful Americans may find something suggestive in these French experiences and reasonings. We, too, are rushing into cities and seeking Vanity Fair rather than Paradise. We, too, call upon the monster Machinery to do all the work, while we will do all the "enjoying." But it will be found that real enjoyment does not exist without work, and the best work is done hand in hand with Nature.
